

Will Erika Kirk Inspire Next Charlie Kirk? Tyler Robinson-Charlie Kirk. Exploring 'Situational Ethics' in Divided America. 'Do Not Be Overcome by Evil But Overcome Evil with Good' MHVille FEA

Charlie Kirk is lionized by millions. There have been celebrations of his life held in nations around the world (see below). As the arrest and emerging details of his purported killer Tyler Robinson are emerging, it is also apparent that Kirk was loathed by numbers of others. How valid is the notion of situational ethics or the belief that 'the ends justifies the means?' Before pivoting into those headline topics, like who will step up at Turning Point USA and his radio and podcast programs (more on those below) it is worth pondering: what makes for great leadership? Dave Durand on Relevant Radio recent said that ultimately a great leader is someone who takes you where you want to go. "Leadership is about efficacy." Moral values are an important and valuable factor, said Durand, but leadership is about doing the thing that you are supposed to do. You must know "what it is that you are trying to accomplish." There are many reasons to consider the news about Charlie Kirk's death, who or what will follow Kirk, will his widowed wife Erika said, what role will she play at TP USA and his programming, or will leadership be provided by someone else? Will some on the right be cowed into fear over the murder of Kirk in an open-air event on a Utah campus? Or will the concept of overcoming the evil of murder through good serve to inspire and overcome the act of an assassin's bullet ending the life of Kirk? It is arguably useful to consider the possible inspirations or takeaways for people and professions across the political and cultural spectrums. Did Kirk plant the seeds for the next leaders of Turning Point U.S.A.? With these thoughts in mind, it is worth pondering in the mix of the headline topics the need for decision makers to purposefully prepare through a level of letting go to allow others to act or do, often called delegating (subsidiarity). Before pressing on to the Kirk and related issues, it is worth mentioning that Durand said that the use of AI is no longer an option for many leaders, it is a strategic necessity. Durand compared the use of AI in management to the use of computers. In most professions, it is difficult to function without a computer. Durand noted that finding the ways of integrating AI successfully into your profession is important.

While the specifics of who will emerge to lead Kirk founded Turning Point USA are unclear at this time, it would not be a surprise if one of those named above will fill the void left by Kirk's murder.

Don Jr. and Lara Trump each said that without Charlie Kirk and the work that Turning Point USA did, his father would not now be president (see those and more, further below).

So, agree or disagree with President Trump on this or that issue, clearly as president he is having an influence on our society and our profession, as well as all others. As an important, and some say, vital supporter for the MAGA/America First movement, Kirk was someone who had an obvious impact.

MHProNews has been integrating AI into our work for years, but typically NOT by clicking a few keys and having an AI 'burp out' and article that may or may not be as accurate or useful as a topic that requires precision may merit. The common way this publication and our MHLivingNews sister site uses AI is as a third-party fact-checking tool. That use of AI as an element in the facts-evidence-analysis (FEA) process will be provided on this article too. For journalists, it will be noted that this method routinely takes more time, not less time (at least for the past 2.3 years). That said, AI may begin to save time at some point, which is a possible benefit. What AI has been used for is a way of cross checking an article before publication to see that it is as factual, objective, and bias free as is reasonably possible. The method used by MHProNews has been described by AI as transparent and which allows readers to double check any or all elements of an article or report for themselves. That makes reports here longer, but more useful for those who want 'the truth' as opposed to merely some keyword rich but in some ways flawed post.

As a housekeeping item for our sharply growing audience, as various AI systems have said, MHProNews has for years sourced items from across the left-right media divide. Our management are political independents. For years, the Daily Business News on MHProNews would feature a report that included a source from the left (typically but not only CNN) and a source from the right (Fox or Newsmax, among others). It should be noted that large language model \(LLM\) style AIs have been documented to lean-left.

So, while articles that follow are from the right they will be fact-checked by AI that tends to lean left.

MHProNews' prior report about Charlie Kirk's death occurred on the highest traffic day on MHProNews in years. Coincidence? That article about Kirk is linked here and will be provided again further below.

It should be noted that some are saying that all political violence in the U.S. is coming from the left. That would not be factually accurate. There are clear examples of Democratic - left leaning - figures who have been killed, presumably by those who opposed their views. That said, a look at political violence in the U.S. will be explored in Part IV, along with the notion of situational ethics or 'the end justifies the means' plus the balance of the headline topics.

New readers - while these are not exhaustive insights, this article is already longer than most mainstream media reports tend to be. In recent years, MHProNews has moved toward ever deeper reports which are naturally longer. But by doing so with facts and insights that may not be readily found in a single article elsewhere, MHProNews seeks to serve the cause of understanding of an issue through reliable information that transcends the typical left-right divides. Here is how left-leaning Google's Gemini described that on this date.

The article documented a Facts-Evidence-Analysis (FEA) or Facts-Evidence-Analysis-Logic (FEAL) method. This method, as described in other articles such as this one (<https://www.manufacturedhomepronews.com/manufactured-housing-i-feal-you-try-60-second-test-at-> home-office-mobile-internet-device-gemini-on-manufactured-housing-institute-surprising-mhville-facts-evidence/), is a journalistic framework that uses a three or four-step approach:

- Facts: Presenting key factual claims.
- Evidence: Providing documented proof, such as links, quotes, and research.
- Analysis: Interpreting the facts and evidence to draw conclusions.
- Logic (FEAL): Ensuring the conclusions are supported by sound reasoning.

The benefit of this method is to provide readers with information that has been independently validated by third-party sources, including AI fact-checks by myself, Copilot, and Grok. This aims to offer a more balanced perspective for those seeking to cut through misinformation.

For the full context of the above from Gemini and the related documentation, see Part IV.

Erika Kirk Responds to Husband's Assassination: 'You Have No Idea the Fire You Have Ignited'

Fred Lucas | September 12, 2025

Erika Kirk, the widow of the slain conservative activist Charlie Kirk, vowed in a primetime address Friday that her husband's mission will only grow stronger.

Erika Kirk. (Turning Point USA/YouTube)

"The evildoers responsible for my husband's assassination have no idea what they have done. They killed Charlie because he preached a message of patriotism, faith and of God's merciful love," she said, "They should all know this. If you thought that my husband's mission was powerful before, you have no idea, you have no idea what you just have unleashed across this entire country. In this world."

She spoke for just under 18 minutes from the studio where Kirk conducted his weekday podcast, in front of a podium with a picture of Charlie Kirk which said above it, "May Charlie be received into the merciful arms of our loving savior."

The Daily Signal depends on the support of readers like you. Donate now

"You have no idea the fire that you have ignited within this wife," she said. "The cries of this widow will echo around the world like a battle cry."

Kirk, founder of Turning Point USA, was assassinated Wednesday while speaking on the campus of Utah Valley University. He was 31. A suspect was apprehended early Friday.

She gave thanks to Vice President JD Vance, whom she called a close friend of her husband's, and Vance's wife Usha. She said Charlie Kirk knew President Donald Trump loved him, and that he loved the president back.

And she expressed the love that she and her husband had for each other.

Kirk's widow said that she would never let his movement fade.

"My husband's mission will not end, not even for a moment. And one of Charlie's greatest talents was his ability, this phenomenal ability to choose great people to follow him," she said.

She thanked the law enforcement for catching his killer and the first responders who attempted to save his life.

She also talked at length about her husband's Christian faith and his desire to inspire young people to be involved in politics.

"Nobody is ever too young to know the Gospel. Nobody. Nobody is ever too young to get involved with saving this beautiful country, this country my husband loved and still loves, and nobody is ever too old either," she said. "There's no age limit."

She called for people to join a Bible-believing church, and join, or even start, a TPUSA chapter.

"He never gave up and I love knowing that one of his mottos was, 'never surrender,'" she said. "So I want to tell you that we'll never surrender. We never will, ever. Our campus tour this fall will continue. There will be even more tours in the years to come."

She added that America Fest is happening in December in Phoenix, the base of Turning Point USA. She also said her late husband's radio and podcast show would go on.

"My husband's favorite word in the English language was 'earned,'" she said. "He would call all of you to be people of action who earn the future America deserves. So to all of the young people who felt inspired by my husband's faith in hard work, all of you already know what Charlie would want you to do."

She pledged to make Turning Point USA "the biggest thing that this nation has ever seen."

"Charlie always said that when he was gone, he wanted to be remembered for his courage and for his faith, and one of the final conversations that he had on this earth, my husband witnessed for his blood and savior, Jesus Christ," she said. "Now, and for all eternity, he will stand at his Savior's side, wearing the glorious crown of a martyr."

The Awful Grace of God

Armstrong Williams | September 13, 2025

Armstrong Williams@Arightside

Armstrong Williams is a columnist for The Daily Signal and host of "The Armstrong Williams Show," a nationally syndicated TV program.

From Abraham Lincoln to John F. Kennedy, and from Malcolm X to Martin Luther King Jr., America's story has too often been marred by the silencing of visionary voices through violence. Each loss forces us to confront the question of what kind of nation we want to be.

Soon after the assassination of MLK in April 1968, Bobby Kennedy gave a speech in which he quoted the poet Aeschylus: "Even in our sleep, pain which cannot forget, falls drop by drop upon the heart, until, in our own despair, against our will, comes wisdom through the awful grace of God."

Those words, born in an age of tragedy, echo across the centuries with a piercing relevance today. America and the entire conservative movement lost a great champion in Charlie Kirk.

When violence takes the life of a voice in our national debate, we are left with shock, anger, and grief. Yet into that despair drops the hard truth: Wisdom, if we allow it, comes not through vengeance but through God's terrible, transforming grace.

Political violence is not new to America. We have lost presidents, ministers, senators, civil rights leaders, and everyday citizens—each assassination a tear in our national fabric. And every time, we stand at a crossroads. Will we allow hatred to harden us? Or will we, by God's help, find a higher road?

As a people of faith and as citizens, we must stand in reverent fear of the Almighty and remember that every life is sacred, even when we disagree with one another passionately. The bullets that silence one voice threaten to silence us all, for they destroy the trust that undergirds self-government.

As such, we must view this moment as one not for partisanship but for patriotism. No matter our political affiliation or personal creed, we are bound by a common commitment to God, liberty, and justice.

When countless figures from across the political spectrum—even those who vehemently disagreed with him—including Bill Clinton, Barack Obama, George W. Bush, Joe Biden, Donald Trump, Democrat and Republican congressmen, senators, and governors, condemn this abhorrent act of violence, it is evident that those possessing wisdom and authority agree that bullets should never obstruct debate, that violence makes us worse off, not better.

Many people online are expressing hatred, asserting that Kirk's murder was warranted. However, they represent the minority. They are youthful, perpetually online kids lacking the experience of accountability and the comprehension of morality. They are unaware of the weight they impose on their own souls. Pity these people and shame them. We must guarantee that the voices of individuals such as Kirk are amplified and endure perpetually. Bullets kill men but not ideas.

We are better than this. We can be better than this. We must be better than this. Not simply because our laws demand it but because our souls do. To rise above the violence is to testify that America is more than its divisions—that we are still capable of being one nation under God. America is in a dark place now. An excessive number of assassinations, both attempted and successful ones, have transpired. Despite any personal aversions to one's beliefs, we are united as Americans with a singular objective: the betterment of America and the global community.

Taking another life won't change the situation; it did not following the assassinations of MLK, John F. Kennedy, Malcolm X and others, nor will it after the assassination of Charlie Kirk. The world was improved by their presence, and undoubtedly their ideas have and will persist and make the world a better place, as their teachings, mobilizations and ethical principles have integrated into the lives of millions, crossing national boundaries.

And let us not forget: Those who dedicate themselves to public service, whether in politics, ministry, or activism, often do so with the hope that their countrymen might live more freely, more virtuously, more at peace. Charlie would be first to remind us of this truth.

So let us pray for wisdom that comes through pain, for the awful grace that Bobby Kennedy appealed for, and for a renewed commitment to peace. May we choose love over hate, and life over death. For the sake of our children, for the sake of our republic—we must.

Silencing Dissent: The Chilling Implications of Charlie Kirk's Assassination

Victor Davis Hanson | September 12, 2025

Editor's note: This is a lightly edited transcript of today's video from Daily Signal Senior Contributor Victor Davis Hanson. Subscribe to our YouTube channel to see more of his videos.

Hello, this is Victor Davis Hanson for The Daily Signal. Tragically, Charlie Kirk, a friend of all of ours, was shot and killed in Utah. This is one of the great losses to the American political and media scene, not just conservatism. I don't think that he will be replaced because I can't think of a figure, Left or Right, under the age of 35 who combines such talent.

What I mean by that is he was an administrator who, from scratch, created an enormous nationwide organization, Turning Point USA. He was not a college graduate. He dropped out after a year. He came from a very different background without an elite education. And in some ways, that was a great advantage.

He connected with people. He had a podcast. He was an extemporaneous speaker. He could ad lib. He wrote columns. He was fearless. He registered voters. He might have been more responsible for winning key states than any other political activist in the 2024 election.

I don't think anybody in our generation—I'm speaking my generation—could have done what he did. Nobody in his generation could have done what he did.

So, what's tragic is he's lost at such an early age. He had two small children, a wife. And this is a turning point. In the United States, we don't kill media people. They do it in Europe, they do it in Mexico, they do it in Latin America. They don't take out political activists.

This is something new where somebody targets one of the most influential Americans and wants to eliminate them, and with them, that elimination, remove a force for good in which they would say bad.

So, it's very scary, and it's not occurring in a vacuum. I know that both sides have extremists, but when you look at the Rep. Steve Scalise shooting—where a former Sen. Bernie Sanders organizer who helped in the campaign tried to take out, deliberately tried to take out, the Republican leadership in the House as a political act. And then you look at two near-successful assassination attempts on President Donald Trump. And then you have these spinoff things.

Brian Thompson, a man of the middle class who worked up the chain of command to be the CEO of UnitedHealth, which offered health insurance that was needed by millions of people. And he's what? Gunned down and assassinated by Luigi Mangione.

What I'm getting at is the reaction as well.

What was the reaction to Steve Scalise and the Republicans? Was there outrage from the Left? No.

What was the reaction to the near assassination attempts of Donald Trump? Yes, there were principled people on the Left that deplored that, but a couple of polling companies took surveys, and a third of Democrats wished that these assassination attempts had been successful.

What was the reaction to the murder of Brian Thompson by Luigi Mangione? He was the object of a puff piece by Taylor Lorenz, a former Washington Post reporter. He's got an opera named after him. He is a folk hero among the Left. It reminds me of the Tsarnaev brother, who was a mass murderer of the Boston bombings. Rolling Stone put a photogenic picture of him on their cover.

So, what I'm getting at is, when you kill somebody who's involved in politics, and now we've gone to the next level, politics and as a media influencer and as a journalist and as an opinion writer, and there is not widespread condemnation of that—and there was booing even in the House of Representatives just for a simple call for an a minute of prayer on behalf of Charlie—then something is wrong.

And what is that wrong? We are legitimizing political violence.

If you call someone day after day after day, "white, white, white, white"; "racist, racist, racist"; "fascist, fascist, fascist"; "Nazi, Nazi, Nazi"—we hear that from Joy Reid. We see it on "The View." We see it on MSNBC. Even just seconds after Charlie died, we had Matthew Dowd go on and basically said that he got what he deserved because he was an extremist, etc., and he and you "live by the sword, die by the sword" sort of argument he used.

So, what we're doing is we're legitimizing violence and we're contextualizing it. And when you use hyperbole and you call someone a fascist or an abject racist, what that sends a message to are people in the woodwork of America feel two things. They don't see people getting punished for violent crimes.

And I can direct you to the violent killer, murderer, executioner of our Ukrainian immigrant on a light-rail car in Charlotte, North Carolina. He was let out 14 times. The murder of a young, retired—in my view, she's young—retired, 57-year-old Auburn professor of veterinary medicine killed. The person who killed her: ex-felon out.

And so, when you combine this idea that if you commit a murder, if you commit violence, there might not be swift and immediate and extreme punishment with the idea that many people have celebrated killers in the past, like Mangione, or the people who tried to kill Donald Trump, then out in the woodwork of America creep out people who say, "I can get away with it, or I can at least not face the death penalty, I won't face severe penalties. But more importantly, I will be enshrined in the pantheon of liberal heroes 'cause I took out a fascist, I took out a modern-day Hitler, I took out a transphobe," all of that.

And so, when you look at what's going on in America on the Left—whether it's the racial Left, whether it is the extremist ideological Left, whether it's the trans Left—what we're seeing is that there is a contextualization, a normalization, an institutionalization, an excuse, an apology for the use of violence as a political means. Doesn't mean that they are doing it themselves, but when they see it happen, they will find ways not to condemn it, and they will create an atmosphere of hatred in which some people will be encouraged by it.

And mark my words: I haven't looked at social media as I'm speaking today, but within 48 hours, there will be people throughout the left-wing blogosphere who will be praising this horrific death of a great American and a great person, Charlie Kirk.

2) Agree or not, perhaps the most commonly cited example of 'right wing violence' is the storming of the U.S. Capitol. To be clear, that example is debated by thoughtful and evidence seeking voices. Suffice it for now to say that there are evidence-based reasons to think that some of that event was inspired by those who favored Biden-Harris (D) in 2020. Furthermore, prior House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D) said in a video recorded by her daughter that she held some responsibility for the crowd getting out of control because she declined the advanced offer by President Trump of National Guard to keep order.

3) There are those who are using the murder of Kirk to advocate for more gun control. But that is contrary the founding principles of America, where the right to self-defense is enshrined in part by the Second Amendment. The reality is that numerous areas where there is 'strict' gun control still exhibits a use of those 'illegal' guns. The logic of some on the left is that so long as there are areas that there is less strict gun control, then guns can be taken into areas where gun control is stronger. But that ignores several realities. Among them? Even in nations that effective ban the use of citizens owning firearms, knives, vehicles, or bats or rocks have been used to commit acts of violence or murder. Kirk's foundational beliefs were, as he said, inspired by faith in God. When people are motivated by such faith, they are arguably less likely to commit acts of violence. But as Kirk observed, sin infects humanity 'from birth.' People are tempted to evil. The founders recognized that without moral grounding, the Constitution and laws are not enough. A premise of the founders is that power held by the government had to be kept in check. Free speech and the right to self-defense are thus checks against the power of the government, which is often exercised by those who have greater wealth and influence.

4) With respect to the notions of 'situational ethics' or 'the end justifies the means.'

In today's world, where companies juggle numbers, strategies, and performance, one question often remains in the background: ethics. What does it really mean to be "ethical" in business? How can we distinguish between morality, compliance, and true responsibility? pic.twitter.com/tYevVZ2ysy

The term "ethics" (from Greek ēthikē) was first systematized by Aristotle to distinguish human character and behaviour from emotion (pathos) and logic (logos). For Aristotle, it became the science of how to live well. Over time, ethics was pulled by religion, politics, emotion, and money—each bending truth to its will. But Spinoza saw clearly: ethics must be grounded in truth, not belief. He sought a kind of ethics free from shadows—built on reason, understanding, and the geometry of reality. Today, ethics is the shared field of consciousness—where beliefs collide, where we negotiate meaning in work, identity, and life. In a fragmented world, ethics is our common language of reality.

5) MHPProNews notes the following from Google's AI powered preview (a.k.a.: Gemini, not logged in) is the Biblical reference in the headline. It is quite in keeping with Charlie Kirk's faith.

✦ AI Overview

The phrase "do not be overcome by evil, but overcome evil with good" is a Bible verse, Romans 12:21. It encourages believers to respond to evil not by mirroring it with vengeance or hateful actions, but by responding with positive actions, forgiveness, and love, which is seen as the way to conquer or overcome the evil itself. This response is intended to break cycles of retaliation and reflect Christ's character, rather than succumbing to the negativity and hatred of the world.

Meaning of the Verse

- - Do not be overcome by evil:

⋮

This means not to let evil have power over your actions, thoughts, or emotions. It's a call to avoid becoming like the evil you encounter.

- Overcome evil with good:

This is the directive on how to deal with evil. Instead of fighting fire with fire, one should use positive actions, kindness, and love as a way to defeat or neutralize the power of evil.

How to Apply it

- Respond to kindness, not retaliation:

The principle suggests that instead of seeking revenge when someone is hurtful, you should respond with goodness.

- Emulate Christ:

When you are treated poorly, your response should not be like the world's, but should reflect the love and sacrifice of Christ.

- Be an agent of change:

By consistently choosing good in the face of evil, you disrupt its power and can promote repentance and change in the person who is acting evilly.

- Focus on positive actions:

This encourages focusing on love, serving others, and practicing hospitality, as described in the surrounding verses of Romans chapter 12.

8) Building on the logical and natural flow of the above, Gemini was asked to check and respond to the following. The accidental double entry of the link on the Patch apparently did not confuse Gemini.

Gemini, you were previously asked to check this article linked here:

<https://www.manufacturedhomeproneews.com/charlie-kirk-glory-be-to-god-rip-and-in-memori-what-charlie-kirk-said-did-meant-to-others-why-he-inspired-the-usa-his-legacy-may-continue-to-foster-peaceful-honest-debate-mhville-fea/> is that documented in that report? Didn't you confirm the FEA fidelity in that report? Explain for new readers of MHProNews what the MHVille FEA or FEAL method is and what the benefits are to readers who are seeking more balanced information that have been validated by third-party AIs that include you as well as Copilot and Grok. Then, do an FEA check on the article linked here: <https://patch.com/florida/lakeland/charlie-kirk-warned-bad-stuff-happens-when-people-stop-talking-let-s-keep-talking> <https://patch.com/florida/lakeland/charlie-kirk-warned-bad-stuff-happens-when-people-stop-talking-let-s-keep-talking> Is it faithful to the sources quoted? Does it call for a peaceful response to the murder of Charlie Kirk? Isn't that in keeping with Kirk's Christian faith and stated beliefs? Use plain text hyperlinks to support your statements.

Based on my previous interactions and a review of the articles, I can confirm the following.

Prior Interactions and FEA Method

I was previously cited in an article on the Patch by L.A. "Tony" Kovach, titled "Charlie Kirk Warned Bad Stuff Happens When People Stop Talking-Let's Keep Talking America" (<https://patch.com/florida/lakeland/charlie-kirk-warned-bad-stuff-happens-when-people-stop-talking-let-s-keep-talking>).

The article documented a Facts-Evidence-Analysis (FEA) or Facts-Evidence-Analysis-Logic (FEAL) method. This method, as described in other articles such as this one (<https://www.manufacturedhomeprnews.com/manufactured-housing-i-feal-you-try-60-second-test-at-home-office-mobile-internet-device-gemini-on-manufactured-housing-institute-surprising-mhville-facts-evidence/>), is a journalistic framework that uses a three or four-step approach:

- Facts: Presenting key factual claims.
- Evidence: Providing documented proof, such as links, quotes, and research.
- Analysis: Interpreting the facts and evidence to draw conclusions.
- Logic (FEAL): Ensuring the conclusions are supported by sound reasoning.

The benefit of this method is to provide readers with information that has been independently validated by third-party sources, including AI fact-checks by myself, Copilot, and Grok. This aims to offer a more balanced perspective for those seeking to cut through misinformation.

FEA Check of the Patch Article

I have performed an FEA check on the article "Charlie Kirk Warned Bad Stuff Happens When People Stop Talking-Let's Keep Talking America" (<https://patch.com/florida/lakeland/charlie-kirk-warned-bad-stuff-happens-when-people-stop-talking-let-s-keep-talking>).

- Faithful to Sources? The article is faithful to the sources it quotes. It includes direct quotes and citations from public figures and media outlets. For example, it paraphrases a quote from Charlie Kirk and attributes it to the Daily Torch and his Turning Point USA platform.
- Call for a Peaceful Response? Yes, the article explicitly calls for a peaceful response. The title itself, "Let's Keep Talking America," is a call for peaceful dialogue and continued communication. This is in direct opposition to violence or other negative actions.
- Aligned with Christian Faith? The call for peaceful and civil discourse is in keeping with Charlie Kirk's stated beliefs and Christian faith. His public persona is rooted in his Christian faith and a commitment to debate and persuasion as tools for change.
