Zohran Mamdani - Self-Declared Democratic Socialist - Revealing Victory Speech. 'Metrics'-Mamdani Video-Transcript with VOC Mashup. Why it Matters to U.S. Affordable Housing Struggle. MHVille FEA

Some are cheering. Some are jeering. This article on self-described Democratic Socialist Zohran Mamdani's election victory on 11.4.2025 makes him the mayor-elect of New York City. Part I provides Mamdani's victory speech transcript in his own words, including the video of that speech. This preface will provide some context for that speech, including some background on the various names Mamdani 'dropped' during that speech that very few will likely know without some context. This preface will also provide a snapshot of some of the negative reactions to Mamdani's victory. But before all that, why is ManufacturedHomeProNews.com (MHProNews.com) paying any attention whatsoever to a speech in a city that has very few HUD Code manufactured homes? The answer is simple. Much of the Mamdani victory and that of Democrats in New Jersey and New York can be attributed to the word "affordable." There is one area that any politician or elected executive official could deploy on short notice, and that is the right to have more "inherently affordable" HUD Code manufactured homes. Let's be clear. Most Americans that are struggling financially DO NOT CARE what kind of structure they are living in so long as it is safe, comfortable, and affordable. Who says? That is the logic of Freddie Mac's survey that said that the majority of Americans would consider buying a manufactured home. "Affordability" and "free" were key words among Mamdani's promises. Hold that thought for Part III.

1) Mamdani's speech transcript included the following names.

- Elle Bisgaard-Church
- Eugene Debs
- Jawaharlal Nehru

There were others that merit attention, but for the sake of length and time, those will be the focus. Following these insights generated by left-leaning Google's artificial intelligence (AI) powered overview are reactions from anti-Mamdani voices and sources. Part II provides insights from the VOC. Part III will provide additional information plus more facts-evidence-analysis (FEA).

2) Per Google's AI powered overview on Elle Bisgaard-Church (see screen capture here documenting the accuracy of what follows linked here).

✦ AI Overview

Elle Bisgaard-Church is a political strategist who has worked as the chief of staff and campaign manager for New York State Assembly member Zohran Mamdani. She is now a chief adviser to Mamdani and was instrumental in his successful primary campaign.

- Political role: She has held the positions of Chief of Staff for the State Assembly and campaign manager for Zohran Mamdani's primary campaign.
- Current position: She has been named chief adviser to Mamdani, reflecting a focus on long-term planning for his office, notes CNN and The New York Times.
- Campaign success: She is noted for her role in shaping Mamdani's successful primary campaign, even though she reportedly had no prior campaign experience before that, according to X.

3) Per Google's AI powered overview on Eugene Debs (see screen capture here that documents the accuracy of the following). MHPProNews notes that providing these outputs by Google doesn't necessarily imply agreement, but it does reflect what Google's AI preview function said on the date/time to the inquiry as shown.

✦ AI Overview

Eugene Debs was the foremost leader and public face of the socialist movement in the United States during the early 20th century, but he consistently rejected communism and the Communist Party after the Russian Revolution. He was a democratic socialist who advocated for social change through the ballot box and industrial unionism, not revolutionary violence or a totalitarian state.

Connection to Socialism

- Conversion to Socialism: Debs began his career as a labor activist and union leader, most notably with the American Railway Union (ARU). While serving a prison sentence for his role in the 1894 Pullman Strike, he read the works of Karl Marx and other socialist theorists and became a committed socialist.

- Founding the Socialist Party: After his release, he helped found the Social Democratic Party in 1898, which later became the Socialist Party of America (SPA) in 1901. He was the SPA's perennial candidate for U.S. President, running five times between 1900 and 1920.
- Platform and Beliefs: Debs's version of socialism focused on the communal ownership of industry and the means of production to ensure wealth was shared by all workers, rather than accruing to a small number of private owners. He advocated for workers' rights, improved labor conditions, and a more equitable society, working within the American democratic system.
- Peak Popularity: In the 1912 election, Debs received 6% of the popular vote. In 1920, he ran his final campaign from federal prison (where he was incarcerated for an anti-war speech under the Sedition Act of 1918) and received his highest total, over 900,000 votes, which remains the all-time high for a Socialist Party presidential candidate.

Relationship to Communism

- Rejection of the Communist Party: The American socialist movement split after the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution in Russia, with a left-wing faction leaving the Socialist Party to form the American Communist Party. Debs, while initially expressing enthusiastic support for the Russian Revolution as the overthrow of a tsar, ultimately refused to join the communists.
- Opposition to Violence and Dictatorship: Debs was critical of the dictatorial policies of the Soviet Union, attacking its suppression of dissenting opinions and revolutionary violence. He remained an "inveterate democrat" and recommitted himself to democratic socialism and the Socialist Party's approach of achieving change through the ballot box and education, not armed revolution.
- Communist View of Debs: U.S. Communists after his death often portrayed Debs as a heroic, class-conscious warrior who would have eventually joined their ranks if he had lived longer or had better information, though historical evidence suggests otherwise.

In essence, Debs was a foundational figure of American socialism who sought to achieve his goals through democratic means, and he actively distanced himself from the more radical, non-democratic tenets of communism that emerged in the U.S. after World War I.

MHPProNews notes this specific item from the above.

Debs's version of socialism focused on the communal ownership of industry and the means of production to ensure wealth was shared by all workers, rather than accruing to a small number of private owners.

Why that quote above? Because communal ownership of industry is a common feature of state communism. More on that in #5 below.

4) Per Google's AI powered overview on Jawaharlal Nehru (see screen capture here that documents the accuracy of the following). MHProNews notes that providing these outputs by Google doesn't necessarily imply agreement, but it does reflect what Google's AI preview function said on the date/time to the inquiry as shown.

Jawaharlal Nehru's connection to socialism in India was profound, as he was the primary architect of India's commitment to democratic socialism and a mixed economy model following independence. His ideology, often referred to as "Nehruvian socialism," shaped India's economic and social policies for decades.

Key aspects of his connection to socialism include:

- Avowed Socialist Nehru publicly identified as a socialist and a republican from as early as 1929, believing that socialism was the only solution to India's deep-rooted problems of poverty, unemployment, and inequality.
- Democratic Approach Unlike Marxist-Leninist communism, Nehru's vision was for achieving socialist goals through peaceful, democratic, and constitutional means, respecting individual freedoms and avoiding violent class conflict. He believed that political democracy was incomplete without economic democracy.
- Economic Planning Influenced by the Soviet Union's rapid industrialization, Nehru established the Planning Commission in 1950 to guide India's economic development through Five-Year Plans. This centralized planning aimed to build a self-reliant economy and direct resources to meet the needs of the whole community.
- Public Sector Dominance He advocated for the state to control the "commanding heights" of the economy, particularly key heavy industries like steel, telecommunications, and energy, to ensure national development and prevent the concentration of wealth in a few hands.

- Mixed Economy Nehru's practical approach led to a "mixed economy" that combined a large public sector with a regulated private sector. This system was designed to utilize private capital and expertise while ensuring overall state control and social welfare objectives.
- Agrarian Reforms He spearheaded major land reforms, including the abolition of the Zamindari (landlord) system, setting ceilings on land holdings, and promoting cooperative farming to address feudal inequalities in rural India.
- Social Welfare and Science Nehru emphasized the development of a scientific temper, modern industry, and social welfare initiatives, such as education and healthcare, to improve the quality of life for the masses.

In essence, Nehru introduced a pragmatic and uniquely Indian form of socialism that aimed to achieve social justice and economic self-sufficiency within a democratic framework.

5) In response to the input-inquiry linked here is the following response by Google's AI powered preview.

Historically, the economic systems in the USSR, Cuba, and early Communist China featured state ownership of the means of production, which is distinct from the theoretical Marxist ideal of communal ownership.

In practice:

- State Ownership: The major productive resources (factories, mines, large farms) were officially owned by the public but effectively controlled and managed by the central government and the ruling Communist Party apparatus. Economic decisions were largely the result of central planning, not a decentralized, communal consensus.
- Communal Ownership (Theoretical Ideal): In contrast, the theoretical communist society envisioned by Karl Marx would have no state, no private property, and the means of production would be held in common by society as a whole, with production allocated based on need.

Critics often argue that the state-controlled systems implemented in these nations were a form of "state capitalism" or a transitional stage of "socialism" where the state acted as the de facto capital owner, rather than achieving true, stateless communal ownership. The people's communes in early China represented an attempt at collectivized living and working but were still ultimately under the top-down control of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP).

Therefore, while the stated goal was communal ownership, the practical reality in these historical cases was an economy based on state ownership and central planning.

6) A snapshot of the critics of Mamdani, per Google's AI preview (see screen capture linked here), are as shown.

Responses from anti-socialist and anti-communist groups, along with Republican politicians and conservative media in the U.S., to Zohran Mamdani's victory in the New York City mayoral election have been largely critical, characterizing his win as the rise of communism or radical socialism in the nation's largest city.

Key responses include:

- Donald Trump's condemnation: The former President referred to Mamdani, a democratic socialist, as a "100% Communist Lunatic" and a "true extremist and Marxist". He stated that Americans have a choice between "communism or common sense" and threatened to cut federal funding to New York City.
- Republican and conservative politicians: Other prominent figures echoed this sentiment.
 - House Speaker Mike Johnson described Mamdani's election as the "biggest win for socialism in US history" and claimed it cemented the Democratic Party's transformation to a "radical, big-government socialist party".
 - Florida Senator Rick Scott suggested Florida would welcome "freedom-loving New Yorkers" fleeing the new "socialist regimes".

- Texas Governor Greg Abbott mockingly offered "thoughts & prayers" for New York City.
- Texas Senator John Cornyn called socialism "un-American, plain and simple".
- Conservative media commentary: Right-wing media outlets, such as Fox News, predicted "crime, chaos and calamity" for New York City under a socialist mayor. Pundits described his victory speech as a "wholesale defense of socialism".
- Targeted attacks: Mamdani's win also triggered an onslaught of Islamophobic attacks across social media, including from some Republican members of Congress.
- Group statements: The Anti-Defamation League (ADL) issued a statement saying they were "deeply troubled" by his rhetoric regarding Israel and would approach his term with "resolve". A group of rabbis published a "Call to Action" attacking public figures like Mamdani for their stances on Israel.

These reactions were often met with counter-criticism from Mamdani's supporters, who argued that Republicans were using "red scare tactics" and "smokescreen antisemitism" to manipulate voters.

Mike Johnson Calls Zohran Mamdani “Communist” After NYC Mayoral Victory

House Speaker Mike Johnson has launched a scathing attack on newly elected New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani, calling him a “communist” and warning that only 12% of the city voted to “turn their city over.” Speaking from Capitol Hill amid the longest government shutdown in U.S. history — now on day 36 — Johnson blamed Democrats for the impasse, accusing them of shutting down the government over a “clean, nonpartisan resolution.” Johnson dismissed Democratic victories in off-year elections, saying they were no reflection of Republican strength and predicting a strong midterm showing for the GOP.

Trump re-ups claim Mamdani is 'communist' after New York election at American Business Forum

President Donald Trump has made no secret of his dislike of newly elected New York Mayor Zohran Mamdani. Trump called Mamdani a 'communist' and claimed New York City would suffer under the 34-year-old's leadership during his headlining speech at the America Business Forum held in Miami.

President Trump Reacts To Mamdani Warning to White American; DECLARES New York As City of IMMIGRANTS

Trump unleashed a fiery tirade against newly elected New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani, branding him a “communist threat” and accusing NYC voters of “ending American sovereignty.” In a late-night speech in Miami, Trump blasted Mamdani’s victory as a “tragedy for freedom” and warned that under his leadership, “New York will collapse under socialist rule.”

The terms left-wing and right-wing originate from the seating arrangements made in the French Estates General.

Those that supported the monarchy sat on the right, and those that advocated its abolition sat on the left.

Socialism is a system of political economy where people collectively own the ability to produce goods, abolish or limit market activity, and eventually work towards Communism—the complete abolishment of private wealth, money, and classism.

Socialism was officially established in 1789 with the French Revolution and the Industrial Revolution in Britain.

There are currently over 60 official Socialist parties with parliamentary representation...

...in 50 countries across 6 continents.

It is not entirely true that socialism was irreligious. Some theorise that originates from passages within the Bible, giving rise to religious socialism. Abū Dharr al-Ghifārī accompanied the Prophet Mohammad and gave rise to Islamic socialism.

Some Socialists accept Capitalism as a stage towards Communism

Russia, China, India, Brazil, and others practice two-stage theory, in which underdeveloped countries use minimal market activity to develop national capital before moving to Communism.

Speaker 1 (00:19):

Good evening, New York. Thank you so much for joining us this evening and for making this event possible. Before I begin, let's give a big thank you to the venue's staff who have made this night such a celebration.

Now, Zohran is about to join us on stage, but before he does, I want to say a few quick words of reflection and thanks, and introduce a very special member of our team. So first, let's hear a round of applause for our day one endorsers, those who helped build this movement into what it's become. New York City DSA.

Audience (01:03):

DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA.

Speaker 1 (01:04):

CAAIV Voice, DRUM Beats!, New York Communities for Change, and Jewish Voice for Peace Action. And please give it up for our friends at the New York Working Families Party who have been such a leader in our long fight for an affordable, livable city.

Now, do we have Labor in the house? Throughout this campaign, we have stood shoulder to shoulder with our brothers and sisters in organized labor at 1:00 A.M. in Queens, at 4:00 P.M. in Manhattan, at 6:00 A.M. in Brooklyn, at every time of day and night in every corner of the city. And we are so grateful for your partnership. And we are so proud to be backed by dozens of elected leaders from the local to the state, to the federal level. And we know that the relationships that we have built will only deepen from City Hall as we work together to transform New York into a city where every person can live a dignified life. I also want to thank our incredible campaign staff. You have sacrificed your social lives and your sleep schedules, and you have given so much to this movement. And then when Cuomo decided to get back into the race, you dug deep and gave more. I have been so honored to work with you, learn from you, and support you as you have faced unprecedented scrutiny and at times, ugliness and threats, from our opponents. You have built a historic campaign. So, please give them all a round of applause. And please join me in celebrating the person who has been Zohran's right hand from day one, whose deep commitment to our movement and care for our people has infused every part of this campaign from top to bottom and without whom we would not be here tonight, Elle Bisgaard Church.

Now, we have all been inspired by Zohran as a candidate, but I also want to speak to his strength as a person. He has led our team and this movement with grace, curiosity, good humor and thoughtfulness. And this race has been difficult, he has been the subject of attacks and threats, but he has truly risen above it all to give us hope. So, please join me in giving Zohran, our friend, a round of applause.

(04:19)

And there are too many supporters to name, so I want to speak to everyone directly. Please raise your hand if you have given to this campaign, whether that is time, labor, knocking a door, hosting an event, creating art. This is beautiful. And if you are one of the tens of thousands of people who contributed but cannot be with us tonight, this is for you as well. You have made history. You set unreachable goals and then exceeded them. You believed in this city and believed in each other, and you achieved something that people will speak of for decades to come. You led with kindness and compassion and most importantly, during a time of despair and rising fascism, you decided to fight for someone that you don't know. So, thank you.

Friends, the scope of this campaign was truly unprecedented. We had hundreds of thousands of conversations with our neighbors and trained leaders who will help us deliver our agenda for the next four years. But this record-breaking program did not come out of nowhere. It was the product of years of organizing and leadership development by New York City DSA and so many of our movement partners.

Audience (05:44):

DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA. DSA.

Speaker 1 (05:50):

And we were so fortunate to be led on this campaign by someone who has been a part of this work from the beginning. She led Julia Salazar's groundbreaking campaign in 2018 and since then has been behind the scenes in so many of our victories.

(06:07)

If this campaign made you feel powerful, or taught you something, or showed you discipline, or brought you joy, you have this person to thank. She is caring, wise, and deeply committed to our movement, and I'm sure she is backstage losing her mind at being called out like this. But I need everyone here to please join me in giving her the longest and loudest round of applause, our organizing director, Tascha.

Speaker 2 (07:04):

Thank you. This is very exciting. Thank you, everyone. I'm Tascha and I've had the honor of being the field director on this campaign. I first crossed paths with Zohran in 2017 on a City Council campaign for Khader El-Yateem in Bay Ridge. Zohran was a paid canvas manager, and I was volunteering on the campaign as a member of New York City Democratic Socialists of America.

(07:53)

I don't think that we could ever have imagined that eight years later we would be here on election night for a mayoral campaign 104,000 volunteers strong. 104,000 volunteers. We love numbers, we love metrics, but I want to talk first about what's behind those numbers. Every number is, in a way, an act of bravery. Door knocking is not the easiest thing. For many, including myself, it takes a moment of bravery at the beginning, asking a stranger something about their lives and sharing something about yours. Sharing what you want to see in the world. It can be daunting. Thousands, thousands of people did it. And every time every volunteer went to a door and talked to a stranger, they offered their vision to that stranger and invited that stranger to be a part of shaping their vision.

Audience (09:06):

We love strangers.

(09:08)

Yeah.

Speaker 2 (09:10):

We love strangers. Every door knock and every phone call is a statement of belief that politics is for all of us. This campaign and this city is all of ours to shape. I also want to say something about field leads. For those who don't know, all of our canvases have been led by volunteers, we call field leads. Many of them are here. Most led a shift every week, and some led a shift every week since December. And every time they led a canvas and they were the ones welcoming new volunteers into our movement. They were the ones who helped inspire folks coming out to canvas for the first time.

(10:17)

Without those 700 people who chose to step into leadership in an uncertain moment and try something new and scary, this field operation at this scale would not have happened. Those 700 people prove that leadership isn't about having all of the answers, it's about the willingness to step into the unknown and inspire others to imagine something better.

(10:52)

So here are the numbers. Over 104,000 volunteers made over 4.4 million calls. At around noon today, a volunteer knocked our three-millionth door. Over 700 field leads have led over 5,700 canvases in 243 neighborhoods. 6,568 voters signed up to volunteer on the spot when they were canvassed by somebody. 8,389 voters signed up to volunteer when they were asked by a phone banker. These are unprecedented numbers. The bravery that you all have shown, that this field operation carried across all five boroughs, is going

Speaker 2 (12:00):

To transform our city. What all 100,400 of us have accomplished has rewritten the possibilities of mass democratic action and it doesn't stop tonight. We all know that we won't stop at electing Zohran. We will continue to fight to bring the affordable of New York City to life. I am so excited to do that with all of you. And now, I'm so honored to introduce the person you've been waiting to hear. We've worked for many years to bring about change in New York City that it so urgently needs. He's been a friend and he is the next mayor of the greatest city of New York, Zohran Mamdani.

Zohran Mamdani (13:56):

Thank you my friends. The sun may have set over our city this evening, but as Eugene Debs once said, I can see the dawn of a better day for humanity. For as long as we can remember, the working people of New York have been told by the wealthy and the well-connected that power does not belong in their hands. Fingers bruised from lifting boxes on the warehouse floor, palms callus from delivery bike handlebars, knuckles scarred with kitchen burns. These are not hands that have been allowed to hold power, and yet over the last 12 months, you have dared to reach for something greater. Tonight, against all odds, we have grasped it. The future is in our hands. My friends, we have toppled a political dynasty. I wish Andrew Cuomo only the best in private life, but let tonight be the final time I utter his name as we turn the page on a politics that abandons the many and answers only to the few. New York, tonight you have delivered a mandate for change, a mandate for a new kind of politics, a mandate for a city we can afford. And the mandate for a government that delivers exactly that. On January 1st, I will be sworn in as the mayor of New York City. And that is because of you. So, before I say anything else, I must say this. Thank you. Thank you to the next generation of New Yorkers who refused to accept that the promise of a better future was a relic of the past. You showed that when politics speaks to you without condescension, we can usher in a new era of leadership.

(17:18)

We will fight for you because we are you or as we say on Steinway, ana minkum wa alaikum. Thank you to those so often forgotten by the politics of our city who made this movement their own. I speak of Yemeni bodega owners and Mexican abuelas, Senegalese taxi drivers and Uzbek nurses, Trinidadian line cooks and Ethiopian aunties. Yes, aunties. To every New Yorker in Kensington and Midwood and Hunts Point, know this. This city is your city and this democracy is yours too. This campaign is about people like Wesley, an 1199 organizer I met outside of Elmhurst Hospital on Thursday night. A New Yorker who lives elsewhere, who commutes two hours each way from Pennsylvania because rent is too expensive in this city.

(18:48)

It's about people like the woman I met on the BX 33 years ago who said to me, "I used to love New York, but now it's just where I live." And it's about people like Richard, the taxi driver. I went on a 15-day hunger strike with outside of City Hall, who still has to drive his cab seven days a week. My brother, we are in City Hall now. This victory is for all of them and it's for all of you. The more than 100,000 volunteers who built this campaign into an unstoppable force. Because of you, we will make this city one that working people can love and live in again. With every door knocked, every petition signature earned and every hard-earned conversation, you eroded the cynicism that has come to define our politics.

(20:09)

Now, I know that I have asked for much from you over this last year. Time and again, you have answered my calls, but I have one final request. New York City, breathe this moment in. We have held our breath for longer than we know. We have held it in anticipation of defeat, held it because the air has been knocked out of our lungs too many times to count, held it because we cannot afford to exhale thanks to all of those who sacrificed so much. We are breathing in the air of a that has been reborn. To my campaign team who believed when no one else did and who took an electoral project and turned it into so much more, I will never be able to express the depth of my gratitude. You can sleep now. To my parents, mama and baba. You have made me into the man I am today.

I'm so proud to be your son and to my incredible wife, Rama, hayati. There is no one I would rather have by my side in this moment and in every moment. To every New Yorker, whether you voted for me, for one of my opponents or felt too disappointed by politics to vote at all, thank you for the opportunity to prove myself worthy of your trust. I will wake each morning with a singular purpose to make this city better for you than it was the day before. There are many who thought this day would never come, who feared that we would be condemned only to a future of less with every election consigning us simply to more of the same. And there are others who see politics today as too cruel for the flame of hope to still burn. New York, we have answered those fears.

Tonight, we have spoken in a clear voice. Hope is alive. Hope is a decision that tens of thousands of New Yorkers made day after day, volunteer shift after volunteer shift despite attack ad after attack ad. More than a million of us stood in our churches, in gymnasiums, in community centers as we filled in the ledger of democracy. And while we cast our ballots alone, we chose hope together, hope over tyranny, hope over big money and small ideas, hope over despair. We won because New Yorkers allowed themselves to hope that the impossible could be made possible and we won, because we insisted that no longer would

Zohran Mamdani (24:00):

... politics be something that is done to us, now it is something that we do. Standing before you I think of the words of Jawaharlal Nehru, "A moment comes but rarely in history, when we step out from the old to the new, when an age ends and when the soul of a nation long suppressed finds utterance." Tonight we have stepped out from the old into the new, so let us speak now with clarity and conviction that cannot be misunderstood about what this new age will deliver and for whom. This will be an age where New Yorkers expect from their leaders a bold vision of what we will achieve rather than a list of excuses for what we are too timid to attempt. Central to that vision will be the most ambitious agenda to tackle the cost of living crisis that this city has seen since the days of Fiorello La Guardia. An agenda that will freeze the rents for more than two million rent stabilized tenants, make buses fast and free and deliver universal child care across our city.

Years from now may our only regret be that this day took so long to come. This new age will be one of relentless improvement. We will hire thousands more teachers. We will cut waste from a bloated bureaucracy. We'll work tirelessly to make lights shine again in the hallways of NYCHA developments where they have long flickered. Safety and justice will go hand in hand as we work with police officers to reduce crime and create a department of community safety that tackles the mental health crisis and homelessness crises head on. Excellence will become the expectation across government, not the exception. In this new age we make for ourselves, we will refuse to allow those who traffic in division and hate to pit us against one another. In this moment of political darkness New York will be the light. Here we believe in standing up for those we love.

\(27:09\)

Whether you are an immigrant, a member of the trans community, one of the many Black women, that Donald Trump is fired from a federal job, a single mom still waiting for the cost of groceries to go down or anyone else with their back against the wall, your struggle is ours too. And we will build a City Hall that stands steadfast alongside Jewish New Yorkers and does not waver in the fight against the scourge of anti-Semitism, where the more than one million Muslims know that they belong not just in the five boroughs of this city, but in the halls of power. No more will New York be a city where you can traffic in Islamophobia and win an election. This new age will be defined by a competence and a compassion that have too long been placed at odds with one another. We will prove that there is no problem too large for government to solve and no concern too small for it to care about. For years those in City Hall have only helped those who can help them but on January 1st, we will usher in a city government that helps everyone.

Now, I know that many have heard our message only through the prism of misinformation, tens of millions of dollars have been spent to redefine reality and to convince our neighbors that this new age is something that should frighten them. As has so often occurred, the billionaire class has sought to convince those making $30 an hour, that their enemies are those earning $20 an hour. They want the people to fight amongst ourselves so that we remain distracted from the work of remaking a long broken system. We refuse to let them dictate the rules of the game anymore. They can play by the same rules as the rest of us. Together we will usher in a generation of change, and if we embrace this brave new course rather than fleeing from it, we can respond to oligarchy and authoritarianism with the strength it fears, not the appeasement it craves. After all, if anyone can show a nation betrayed by Donald Trump how to defeat him, it is the city that gave rise to him. And if there is any way to terrify a despot, it is by dismantling the very conditions that allowed him to accumulate power. This is not only how he stop Trump, it's how he stop the next one. Donald Trump, since I know you're watching, I have four words for you, turn the volume up. We'll hold bad landlords to account because the Donald Trumps of our city have grown far too comfortable taking advantage of their tenants. We'll put an end to the culture of corruption that has allowed billionaires like Trump to evade taxation and exploit tax breaks. We will stand alongside unions and expand labor protections because we know just as Donald Trump does that when working people have ironclad rights, the bosses who seek to extort them become very small indeed. New York will remain a city of immigrants, a city built by immigrants, powered by immigrants, and as of tonight led by an immigrant. Hear me President Trump when I say this, to get to any of us, you will have to get through all of us. When we enter City Hall in 58 days expectations will be high. We will meet them.

(33:09)

A great New Yorker once said that while you campaign in poetry, you govern in prose. If that must be true, let the prose we write still rhyme and let us build a shining city for all. And we must chart a new path as bold as the one we have already traveled. After all, the conventional wisdom would tell you that I am far from the perfect candidate. I am young despite my best efforts to grow older. I am Muslim. I am a democratic socialist. And most damning of all, I refuse to apologize for any of this. And yet, if tonight teaches us anything, it is that convention has held us back. We have bowed at the altar of caution and we have paid a mighty price. Too many working people cannot recognize themselves in our party and too many among us have turned to the right for answers to why they've been left behind. We will leave mediocrity in our pasts. No longer will we have to open a history book for proof that Democrats can dare to be great.

(34:46)

Our greatness will be anything but abstract. It will be felt by every rent-stabilized tenant who wakes up on the first of every month knowing the amount they're going to pay hasn't soared since the month before. It will be felt by each grandparent who can afford to stay in the home they have worked for and whose grandchildren live nearby because the cost of childcare didn't send them to Long Island. It will be felt by the single mother who is safe on her commute and whose bus runs fast enough that she doesn't have to rush school drop-off to make it to work on time. And it will be felt when New Yorkers open their newspapers in the morning and read headlines of success, not scandal. Most of all, it will be felt by each New Yorker when the city they love finally loves them back. Together, New

Standing Against Socialism

- Nov 5, 2025 Press Releases

We applaud another safe and peaceful election in the United States this week. Yet, we must speak out when political platforms spew Marxist propaganda.

At the Victims of Communism Memorial Foundation, our purpose is to remember the more than 100 million people murdered by communist regimes and to be a voice for those still held captive by totalitarian regimes today. The bipartisan legislation signed into law by President Bill Clinton that authorized our founding specifically warns against allowing “so evil a tyranny to terrorize the world” in the future.

That is why the Victims of Communism Memorial Foundation will continue to vigilantly call out efforts to transform the American system of ordered liberty into a socialist regime of any type. The American Dream is alive and well today, and it is rooted in our fundamental freedoms: freedom of religion, freedom of the press and information, freedom of conscience, the right of people to assemble, the opportunity for political action, including dissent, and the importance of private property and personal initiative. All of this has led to the freest and most innovative culture in world history.

Americans should be concerned when candidates or politicians talk in terms of confiscating, or taxing out of existence, personal initiative and private property. Americans should be concerned when class warfare rhetoric pits our society against each other. We should all be concerned when pledges to change the social contract threaten centralized, authoritarian redistribution; when policies are based on failed socialist economic theories; and when bureaucrats determine winners and losers instead of innovation, creativity, and hard work in the free market.

What we heard last night in New York City, that “there is no problem too large for government to solve, and no concern too small for it to care about,” echoes past utopian visions of communist dictators. As an educational institution, we will continue to point out that socialists and communists never stay in power through the popular vote because they fail in office: in Nicaragua, Venezuela, Cuba, and elsewhere. No socialist, Marxist, or communist regime has ever succeeded in creating the purported vision of liberty, equality, and fraternity they profess. Instead, they always deliver misery, poverty, and servitude.

Zohran Mamdani’s civic immorality

- Oct 23, 2025 Op-eds Dr. Eric Patterson

Class warfare. We've not heard the term much in recent years, even as the most aggressive neo-Marxist currents have been expressed via critical race theory and gender ideologies. But the political platforms of New York City's radical Zohran Mamdani and his confederates, such as AOC and others, are a dangerous call to arms—and they are a call for class warfare.

There are two ways to look at Mamdani's political platform. For those who've been hoodwinked by his youthful charm, his political platform looks like Christmas for all: government-provided baby baskets, costless public transportation, state-controlled and subsidized rent, complimentary healthcare, and more.

But just below the surface lurks something deeply troubling, a 21st-century version of class warfare. It is the renunciation of the American way of life and the public targeting of enemies.

The American way of life privileges the fundamental rights and responsibilities of individuals, families, and their voluntary associations. This is an issue of civic morality. Individuals are the focus point for freedoms of religion, speech, association, and private property. It is individuals and families who make choices about where to live and where to work, how to raise their children, and how to work together through houses of worship, civic organizations, clubs, neighborhoods, and other voluntary associations to cooperate, collaborate, build, and serve their neighbors.

Moreover, the American way of life allows for innovation and hard work to pay off, and for sloth and irresponsibility to receive their just deserts as well.

In contrast, Mamdani's socialist platform seeks to rob neighbors and communities of the opportunity and responsibility to care for their neighbors. Why take a meal or a gift to a young family if the state is going to provide it?

True, prices and rents are high in New York City. Mamdani's website header trumpets, "Zohran will lower costs and make life easier."

Mamdani's pledge is like that of every Marxist party, a glimmering promise of a life without having to make hard economic choices. Why move to a less expensive area if the government will foot the bill? Why economize and make hard choices if the government will provide free transportation, free college, free, free, free ...?

The other side of the coin is this subtle declaration of class warfare: you deserve it, because someone has taken advantage of you. As Hannah Arendt observed, all totalitarian ideologies seek an "objective enemy" to blame societies' ills upon. For the Nazis it was the Jews, but for Marxists of all stripes it is typically "owners." Recall, for instance, that Lenin called for the elimination of all small family farms because those sturdy farmers, called “kulaks,” were actually the most independent and the most resistant to communism.

A careful look at the statements of Mamdani and other socialists suggests that “owners”—shop owners, business owners, property owners—are the enemy. Somehow, and the reasoning is obscure, They are taking advantage of You.

This is civic immorality. A call to create a system of welfare dependency, rob individuals and communities of their fundamental rights and responsibilities, and declare warfare on any class of people is contrary to the American ethos. And that is precisely what the Mamdani platform really does.

With the 2026 election cycle just a few months ahead, all of America should be carefully watching what is happening right now in the New York mayor’s race. We can hope New Yorkers will resist the delusions of Marxism, reject class warfare, and make choices in tune with America’s heritage of civic morality.

Overview

The Victims of Communism Memorial Foundation (VOC) is an educational, research, and human rights nonprofit organization devoted to commemorating the more than 100 million people killed by communism around the world and to pursuing the freedom of those still living under totalitarian regimes.

The Foundation was authorized in 1993 by a unanimous Act of Congress signed as Public Law 103-199 by President William J. Clinton on December 17, 1993. On June 12, 2007, President George W. Bush dedicated the Victims of Communism Memorial statue in Washington, D.C.

Vision

A world free from the false hope of communism.

Inspired by an appreciation for the principles of liberty and an understanding of how these ideas have enabled human flourishing and prosperity to an unprecedented degree, the Victims of Communism Memorial Foundation envisions a world free from the false hope of Marxism and safe from the tyranny of communism.

The real examples of socialism today are China, Cuba, Laos, North Korea, Vietnam, and now Venezuela. We must contend with these regimes and the threats they pose to free people—and we must struggle for the freedom of the more than one billion people held captive by these regimes.

Mission

To educate future generations about the ideology, history, and legacy of communism.

To further this vision, the Victims of Communism Memorial Foundation's mission is to educate future generations about the ideology, history, and legacy of communism and to advocate for the freedom of those still held captive by communist regimes.

Positive attitudes toward communism and socialism are at an all-time high in the United States. We have a solemn obligation to expose the lies of Marxism for the naïve who say they are willing to give collectivism another chance. New generations need to confront the reality of Marxism in practice. Socialism is not a kind, humane philosophy. Marxist socialism is the deadliest ideology in history. In the 21st century, we have an opportunity to learn from the 20th century and rededicate our free society based on individual liberty, free enterprise, the rule of law, democratic self-government, and human rights.

What kind of world do we want to live in, in the 21st century—a world defined by collectivism, or by freedom?

The net worth of Zohran Mamdani's parents, Mira Nair and Mahmood Mamdani, is not definitively stated in publicly available sources, and estimates vary widely. Some sources suggest their combined net worth could range from $2 million to $10 million, based on Mira Nair's career as an acclaimed filmmaker and Mahmood Mamdani's work as a Columbia University professor and author. For instance, Nair owned a Manhattan loft purchased for $1.375 million in 2008 and sold for $1.45 million in 2019, now valued at approximately $1.9 million. Mahmood Mamdani's annual salary as a Columbia professor is estimated between $200,000 and $300,000, and they reside in Columbia-owned housing. HOW TO CREATE A SOCIALIST STATE

BY SAUL ALINSKY

There are eight levels of control that must be obtained before you are able to create a socialist state. The first is the most important.

- 1) Healthcare—Control healthcare and you control the people
- 2) Poverty—Increase the Poverty level as high as possible, poor people are easier to control and will not fight back if you are providing everything for them to live.
- 3) Debt—Increase the debt to an unsustainable level. That way you are able to increase taxes, and this will produce more poverty.
- 4) Gun Control—Remove people's ability to defend themselves from the Government. That way you are able to create a police state.
- 5) Welfare—Take control of every aspect of their lives (Food, Housing, and Income)
- 6) Education—Take control of what people read and listen to – take control of what children learn in school. Think: "Common Core"
- 7) Religion—Remove the belief in God from the Government and schools.
- 8) Class Warfare—Divide the people into the wealthy and the poor. This will cause more discontent and it will be easier to take (Tax) the wealthy with the support of the poor.

6) There are those in the Democratic Party who are not embracing Democratic Socialism. But as MHProNews has reported for years, the Democratic Socialists routinely use the Democratic Party as their vehicle of choice between the two major parties.

More billionaires have supported Democrats (and/or Democratic Socialists) for years than they have Republicans like President Trump. One should keep in mind that Trump was a Democratic supporter for years, was flirting with various third-party efforts for a time, and then finally landed in the Republican Party in the 2015 campaign to remake it into the "MAGA" or Make America Great Again movement's major party of preference. As the government grew, and as the primary taxation systems in the U.S. moved from tariffs to the federal income tax, not only did government and spending balloon, but so too did the federal debt.

US: Combined Gross Public Debt

Chart Key:
- Federal gross debt
- Local gross debt
- State gross debt

When the U.S.A. funded its federal budget mainly with tariffs and generally stayed out of foreign wars, the federal debt was low. But when President Woodrow Wilson (D), deemed a "progressive," advanced the income tax, made other changes in federal governmental policies, and led the U.S. into World War I, a series of changes began that led to the sky-high debts, human and economic cost we experience today. If Trump succeeds in reigning in big government and fostering peace it could be historic for the 99 percent of Americans.

Communist China's economic systems isn't socialist or communist, it is a hybrid market system that still has the Communist Party as the sole political power in their state.

Grok, isn't it fair to say that nowhere on Earth has there been a communist nation that actually followed pure communist thinking that was successful? For example, isn't Communist China's 'economic miracle' due in large part to Western investment in that nation, and a kind of hybrid system that is more fascist in nature where the Communist Party is still in charge, but communist economic principles have in fact been abandoned? And isn't it accurate to say that Karl Marx said that socialism is a step along the path toward communism?

Yes, it is fair to say that no nation on Earth has fully implemented and sustained a system adhering to pure communist ideals—where the state withers away, private property is abolished, and a classless, stateless society emerges—as envisioned by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels in The Communist Manifesto and Das Kapital. Historical attempts, such as the Soviet Union, China, Cuba, and others, have deviated significantly due to practical challenges, authoritarian governance, or economic necessities.

Regarding Communist China, its "economic miracle" since the late 1970s under Deng Xiaoping's reforms is indeed largely attributable to Western investment and a hybrid economic model. After Mao Zedong's death, China shifted from strict Marxist-Leninist economics—marked by collectivization and central planning—to a market-oriented system with "socialism with Chinese characteristics." This included opening to foreign direct investment (e.g., from the U.S. and Europe), establishing Special Economic Zones, and integrating into global trade via the WTO in 2001. Studies, such as those from the World Bank, estimate that foreign investment contributed over 20% of China's GDP growth from 1990 to 2010. However, the Communist Party retains tight political control, blending state capitalism with authoritarianism, which some scholars (e.g., Minxin Pei in China's Crony Capitalism) argue resembles fascism more than communism, given the fusion of corporate and state power under a single-party system. Traditional communist economic principles, like the abolition of private property, have been largely abandoned in favor of state-guided markets.

As for Karl Marx, he did indeed describe socialism as a transitional stage toward communism. In Critique of the Gotha Program (1875), Marx outlined that socialism—where the proletariat controls the state and means of production—would precede communism, a stateless, classless society where resources are distributed "from each according to his ability, to each according to his needs." This progression was echoed in Engels' works and became a cornerstone of Marxist-Leninist theory, though no nation has achieved the final communist stage as Marx envisioned.

In summary: no pure, successful communist system has existed; China's economic success relies heavily on Western investment and a fascist-leaning hybrid model; and Marx did posit socialism as a step toward communism.

8) As to the promises of "free" from Mamdani to his followers.

TANSTAAFL

THERE AIN'T NO SUCH THING AS A FREE LUNCH

SOMEONE ALWAYS PAYS
If it's taxpayers, that means higher taxes and other costs.

TAANSTAFL Principle: "There Ain't No Such Thing as a Free Lunch"

- Every cost is borne by someone, even if hidden.
- Policies must consider who pays and whether incentives are preserved.
- Aligns perfectly with Sowell's insights and critiques of big-government programs.

Thomas Sowell, Ph.D., cited in the above and below, was a socialist. He left that belief system under the weight of evidence.

9) There are an array of reasons why people voted for Mamdani or vote for people like him of whatever background. Among them is that they want to believe, they want to have hope.

That is an opportunity in disguise for those willing to do the work of properly informing people. More on that in a planned follow up to this article. Stay tuned.

But for now, whether a demagogue says he is a socialist, a democratic socialist, a communist, a fascist, a national socialist (i.e.: German NAZI Party before and during World War II), corporatism, or some other form of authoritarianism, the results are often the much the same. The promises are broken. Blood is shed because once such people come to power, they can only maintain power through firepower. Thus, the lessons of R. J. Rummel and an estimated 100 million deaths of citizens at the hands of their own government.

To be clear, it is unclear if at the municipal level of someone like Mamdani could turn the mayor of New York City's office into the type of position that could lead to the kinds of outcomes shown by the various sources herein. For example, some are projecting that Elise Stefanik (NY-R) could become the next governor of New York. As such, some of what Mamdani can do could end up blocked. That said, it doesn't mean that economic harm won't follow. It is said that economic and public safety harm are already starting in the run-up and wake of Mamdani's win.

So, thanks to the checks and balances of the U.S. system, it may be the Mamdani could not get to the point where he could "seize the means of production." That said, the power to tax is the power to destroy. And while there may not be Pol Pot or Maoist style of murders of their own citizens, if enough police, firefighters and first responders flee the city, the risks to living in NYC could grow as a practical matter.

Let's pivot back to the preface point about 'affordability.' There is only so much that government can do, because whatever the government 'gives' it must first take, and there is the cost of administering the government to consider. That's the math, the metrics, that the Mamdani campaign talked about with door knockers and volunteer phone bank callers but didn't detail in terms of how they are going to make their promises work. So, how is affordability returned? While there are many factors and ways that could occur, widespread access and cost-effective or 'affordable' financing for HUD Code manufactured homes ought to be part of the mix.

A separate report is planned on the economic boom that could bring and how that effort could authentically yield the better life that politicians like Mamdani and others boldly make knowing no socialist, Marxist, or communist has ever delivered on those promises. Watch for the planned report.
