

Copilot, I want you to consider fundamentally the same things that Gemini did. Note that Gemini had an output glitch that apparently kept it from showing its supporting plain text hyperlinked articles. Hopefully you can do that as part of your FEA on this developing <https://www.manufacturedhomepronews.com/wp-content/uploads/2026/03/Gemini3.5.2026ConfirmsAccuracyofQ-A-MHProNews.png> and <https://www.manufacturedhomepronews.com/wp-content/uploads/2026/03/Gemini3.5.2026MHProNewsQ-A-StansberryClaytonMHProNews.pdf> and Correct, confirm, or clarify as warranted by available evidence online. If you find a response by Berkshire to this critique by Porter Stansberry et al, share it. Use plain text hyperlinks to support your findings.

I have prepared a clear, balanced, and evidence-based summary of Porter Stansberry's critique of Berkshire Hathaway and its impact on the manufactured housing industry, including key points, analysis, and supporting sources. This summary aligns with the facts-evidence-analysis methodology and includes relevant plain text hyperlinks for verification. If you want, I can help you integrate this content into your page or assist with further content creation on this topic. Just let me know how you'd like to proceed.

Copilot, most of that is fine, but one part that merits clarification for the sake of new and returning readers alike. Stansberry does cite Clayton Homes, and by inference manufactured housing. But some of your remarks to my eye may blur who said what. MHProNews and Gemini each provided reasons that Stansberry's findings do have implications for manufactured housing and affordable housing more broadly, but it should be clarified that Stansberry - at least in this cited content - did not directly make that finding, isn't that fair, accurate, and supported by the evidence linked and uploaded to you? Correct, confirm, or clarify as warranted by the FEA methodology.

The clarification you requested is accurate and well supported by the evidence and sources linked and uploaded. Porter Stansberry's open letter specifically critiques Berkshire Hathaway's corporate structure and certain subsidiaries like Clayton Homes but does not explicitly extend those criticisms to the manufactured housing industry or affordable housing more broadly. The broader implications for manufactured housing and affordable housing come from MHProNews and Gemini AI's contextual analysis, which interpret Stansberry's findings in light of Berkshire's market control and industry influence. This distinction is important to maintain clarity and factual integrity in the facts-evidence-analysis methodology for new and returning readers. If you want, I can help you incorporate this clarification into your page content or assist with further content development.

Clarifying Porter Stansberry's Critique and Its Implications for Manufactured Housing

Porter Stansberry's March 2026 open letter to Berkshire Hathaway's board specifically criticizes Berkshire's corporate structure, capital allocation, and certain subsidiaries, including Clayton Homes. However, it is important to clarify that Stansberry himself does not explicitly extend his critique to the manufactured housing industry or affordable housing more broadly in the cited content.

MHProNews and Google's Gemini AI analysis provide additional context and interpretation, highlighting that Stansberry's findings about Berkshire's control over Clayton Homes, dominant lenders, and the Manufactured Housing Institute (MHI) have significant implications for manufactured housing and the broader affordable housing crisis. These insights are derived from the structural and market dynamics Stansberry critiques but are not direct claims made by Stansberry himself.

This distinction is fair, accurate, and supported by the evidence and sources linked and uploaded, including the detailed Q&A and FEA reports. Maintaining this clarity helps new and returning readers understand who is making which claims and preserves the integrity of the facts-evidence-analysis methodology.
