BP-Media Hits and Misses in Iranian-Israeli-U.S.-Middle Eastern Conflict. Has Trump's Gutsy Gamble Reveal Reverse Domino to Unwind CRINK? Indirect MHVille-Affordable Housing Implications. FEA

In reverse headline order, there is only so much that Congress seems to be able to accomplish in the best of circumstances. Given the start of military operations against Iran and the domestic pushback by from Democrats and some others, that may delay consideration of pending so-called affordable legislation; specifically the bipartisan U.S. House's so-called Housing for the 21st Century Act and the U.S. Senate's ROAD to Housing bill. MHPProNews observes that it isn't that discussion of those topics are now over, as the report yesterday linked here makes clear. But perhaps those bills will be pushed back while oil futures surge and discussion of war powers and other hot-button political topics related to the start of military operations against Iran by U.S. and Israeli forces that formally started on 2.28.2026 but which have apparently been in preparation for military and intelligence action several weeks. What the U.S. calls "Operation Epic Fury" and Israel calls "Operation Roaring Lion" the Islamic Iranian regime has labeled an unprovoked attack in the midst of diplomatic efforts. Yet both sides (Israel/U.S. and Iranians) were obviously using those talks as cover for their respective military preparations. Perhaps millions of diaspora Iranians and Iranians in their homeland are celebrating the death of Ayatollah Ali Khamenei (see below) and what many Iranians hope will be the end of what they see as a murderous and tyrannical regime. Many in media on the left or right are capturing several notable points regarding the conflict. But what few are noting is that as important as this is for Iran and those impacted by Iranian support for terror in numerous places around the world, is that this appears to be interlocked with a grand strategy against China and its influence in Venezuela, Iran, Cuba, and other nations. As left-leaning Google's artificial intelligence (AI) overview said, the Iranian campaign appears to be part of a kind of 21st century reverse domino theory that is "dismantling...CRINK." Not mentioned by GAIO re: CRINK was Panama, and how the Trump Administration has reasserted U.S. influence that has reduced China's influence there too. For those in manufactured housing, or other industries, that are importing products from China, it is some 16 months (see report linked below) since it was known that Trump 2.0 would be 'in power' in the U.S. Decoupling supply chains from China has been a pragmatic and periodic topic on MHPProNews for years. Anyone missing that connection with MHVille is missing part of the BP or Big Picture. Even some seemingly pro-MAGA/Trump voices, like ex-NY City Mayor Rudy Giuliani, are arguably on the wrong side of history when they support a new regime in Iran that may be little or no different than the late Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's reign of terror. This post will aim to outline problems and potential from the U.S.-Israeli-Iranian and related conflict, which appears to be drawing new nations in against Iran's Islamic regime.

1) Reminding readers about past articles (beyond the above) on U.S.-China supply chain issues and how that can influence manufactured housing, is this snapshot of the joy and celebration by millions of Iranian diaspora in Western nations and in Iran itself, where such celebration can still carry the risk of death.

2) So, while there is obvious risk from war - political and economic plus the obvious cost in blood and treasure - this specific war may well have several upsides, unlike the Iraq war in 2003. So long as Team

Trump stay with their plan to keep the war short and focused on regime change and the potential for peace and opportunities that may bring, this conflict could be seen by history as the end of a regime that kept much of the Middle East in turmoil for decades.

Here is how the Arab Gulf States have pivoted from this.

3) To the point that Iran - while important all on its own merits - is part of a broader Trump 2.0 counter to China.

How about isolating China? Everything trump does is aimed at China. Venezuela, Iran, threw them out of Panama, nope there is a much bigger fish Trump is frying, regional security in the mid east and freedom for Iran play no small part. Your anti Israel crap is boring.

— Geoff Meadowcroft (@GeoffMeadowcro3) March 2, 2026

— Guy R Costa (@GuyRCosta1) March 2, 2026

U.S. strategy focuses on containing China and limiting its energy leverage. Panama, Venezuela and Iran fit this wider rivalry. Backing Israel serves broader U.S. regional interests, so it's not simply about U.S. soldiers "dying for Israel."

— Aakarshan Yadav (@Im_aakarshan) March 2, 2026

I'm on the "fuck China" bus, and getting it on with Iran is on the roadmap

Do people not understand that Venezuela and Iran (and Panama and also Cuba next) off the table, fuck over China and Russia in major ways?

5) That noted, it doesn't mean that this operation is without risks beyond those American or other allied service men who are involved, or the civilians in the various target areas who are and will take casualties. While one of the X-posts above disputes the notion that this is about the midterms, no one should be blind to the obvious midterm implications. If Trump and his supporters/allies are successful at getting a more America-Israel and neighboring nation friendly government into power in Tehran, it could help Trump and the GOP in the midterms. That helps explain why so many Democrats oppose this move.

7) Iran was a significant part of the problem in Iraq for the U.S. So, those who fear a protracted war that could last months or years need to realize that this may prove different because the head of the snake in the Middle East in many respects could be traced back to the Islamic regime led for decades by now dead Ayatollah Ali Khamenei. How this U.S./Israeli effort turns out could come down to how soon, if at all, Iranians in Iran time their anticipated internal side of the war effort to overthrow the deeply unpopular Iranian Islamic regime.
