7. While the percentages vary by source and circumstances, it has long been thought that homeownership is a key to spreading generational wealth building. For example. Per GAIO, which cited Pew and the Federal Reserve.

Home equity accounts for a median of 45% to 60% of total net worth for U.S. homeowners. This percentage is higher for lower-income households (up to 84%) and lower for higher-income households (around 23%), making it the largest component of wealth for most, according to data from Pew Research Center and the Federal Reserve Survey of Consumer Finances. [1, 2, 3]

Recall that prior HUD Secretary Ben Carson made a similar argument.

"Under President Trump's leadership, our nation is witnessing historic highs in employment, job creation, and economic growth. The financial optimism of everyday Americans has surged to an 18-year high and is nearing an all-time record. For those families who have access to affordable housing, they are facing their bright futures with confidence.

And yet a serious challenge still persists millions of hardworking Americans who seek affordable rents or sustainable homeownership simply cannot get their foot in the door. We have reached the point where many of our nation's teachers, nurses, police officers, and firefighters struggle to live in or around the communities they serve.

What they face is a critical shortage in our country's supply of affordable homes.

This is not just a housing crisis – it has a human face. Homes are at the heart of building strong families, strong communities, and ultimately, a strong country.

HUD's mission is to ensure all Americans have access to safe, quality, and affordable housing. And we believe that manufactured housing has a promising role to play – especially in the area of quality affordable housing.

For that reason, one year ago, I announced that HUD was in position to usher in a "new era of cooperation and collaboration between our Department and the manufactured housing industry."

Today, I'd like to share HUD's current vision for how we are diagnosing affordable housing challenges, and how manufactured housing is an active ingredient in the medication we are prescribing for a stronger America."

Then HUD Secretary Ben Carson, M.D., quote is from the official comments as prepared, per the HUD website, on May 7, 2019. So, keep in mind that those costs per square foot for conventional housing and manufactured homes have risen since then. But the savings rate is about the same. No results for Financial Literacy Month (April) on the Manufactured Housing Institute (MHI) website on 4.30.2026. MHI has said for years that they represent "all segments" of manufactured housing. Per GAIO an "institute" is educational, promotional, and data driven group that is supposed to do more than a typical trade association. "These organizations typically lobby government bodies, publish industry data, and provide marketing, networking, and public relations support for their members." Per GAIO: "Critics, including some industry members, competitors, and trade analysis groups like the Manufactured Housing Association for Regulatory Reform \(MHARR\), argue that MHI's results are subpar despite its size and influence, with reports indicating production has often remained far below 20th-century levels. Critics generally allege that MHI prioritizes the interests of its largest members—major manufacturers and community operators—over the smaller, independent retailers and the overall growth of the manufactured housing industry.

9. As the American Economic Liberties Project reported, builders and developers in or beyond manufactured housing are throttling production through various methods. 11. Sources such as McKinsey & Company, NLIHC and NBER researchers have spotlighted that the lack of affordable housing near where it is needed is causing a two trillion dollar annual economic drag on the U.S. economy.

12. If the U.S. gross domestic product is about $30.7 to $31.5 trillion dollars per year, depending on the source, back of the napkin estimates would suggest that a two trillion-dollar annual boost would be about 6 to 7 percent, which could be a record for recent decades.

13. Analogies can prove useful. AMAC vs. AARP is in the world of senior advocacy akin to MHARR vs. MHI. Another analogy is that it took President Trump to enforce existing laws on the border, not new legislation. Similarly, if existing federal laws are enforced, what conventional builders can't achieve in terms of price points for affordability, manufactured housing can and what is needed is enforcement of existing laws.

14. In a post Treasury-AMAC roundtable meeting with MHARR officials in Washington, D.C. on 4.29.2026, MHPRONews sensed in an off the record discussion that MHARR would be open to teaming up with AMAC in ways that could benefit the economy and each other's members. Will that happen? Time will tell. But it is at this time perhaps the only plausible path to a $2 trillion-dollar boost in GDP.
