Third Party Content Provided Under Fair Use Guidelines.

James Howard Kunstler? 'Cluster F-ck Nation' and October Surprise. Democrats. Republicans. Socialists. Affordable Housing. What Abdulrahman Mohamed El-Sayed and White House said About French Riots, Affordability and Housing Crisis. FEA

James Howard Kunstler? 'Cluster F-ck Nation' 'October Surprise.' Democrats. Republicans. Socialists. Affordable Housing. Abdul El-Sayed v White House on French Riots-Affordability Crisis. FEA

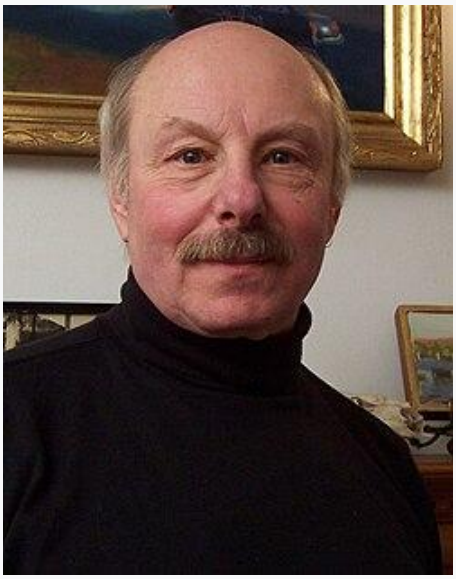
When a human is reading items from across the left-right spectrum, that takes time. Much of that reading is the search for understanding what each of the major parties, and some of the movements behind the scenes of each major party, are doing and why. As early voting is underway in many states and the November 3 election day looms, the balance of power in Congress hangs in the balance. It is no secret that if Republicans lose the House, or the House and the Senate, the impeachment of '45-47' President Trump looms. With that outcome, an effort is promised by several Democrats that Trump's border security and Middle Eastern policy with respect to Iran and its quest for a nuclear weapon are threatened.

James Howard Kunstler

James Howard Kunstler - Wikipedia

https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/James_Howard_Kunstler

James Howard Kunstler



Kunstler in December 2007
Born	New York City, U.S.
Occupations	Writer, social critic, blogger
Spouse	Jennifer Armstrong (1996-2002)
Website	Kunstler.com

James Howard Kunstler is an American writer, social critic, public speaker, and blogger known for his analysis of urban development, suburbanization, and energy issues. Born in New York City to Jewish parents, he gained prominence through his non-fiction works critiquing American suburban development and predicting societal changes based on resource constraints.[1] His most influential books include The Geography of Nowhere (1993) and Home from Nowhere (1996), a critical examination of American suburbia and urban planning, The Long Emergency (2005) and Too Much Magic (2012), which explore the potential consequences of peak oil and energy depletion on modern civilization and humanity's over-reliance on technology to solve problems. Kunstler's work has become standard reading in architecture and urban planning courses, and he has been a prominent spokesperson for the New Urbanism movement.[1][2]

Throughout his career, Kunstler has authored both fiction and non-fiction works, including a series of post-apocalyptic novels beginning with World Made by Hand (2008) that envision a future of localized, low-energy communities. As a journalist, he has written for major publications including The Atlantic, Rolling Stone, and The New York Times. His political views have evolved significantly over time, transitioning from harsh criticism of conservative politics to more recent support for certain conservative positions and skepticism of mainstream Democratic policies.[3][4] While his peak oil predictions proved premature due to technological developments like fracking, Kunstler continues to advocate for sustainable urban planning, improved rail infrastructure, and preparation for what he sees as inevitable resource constraints, maintaining his influence through writing, speaking engagements, and online commentary.[5][6]

Intifada for All

“The Dems are a total mess of cluster B psychopathology. They will continue to humiliate themselves & alienate the normal population.” — JD Haltigan on X

JAMES HOWARD
KUNSTLER

Intifada for All

“The Dems are a total mess of cluster B psychopathology. They will continue to humiliate themselves & alienate the normal population.” — JD Haltigan on X

James Howard Kunstler

Oct 19

A Nice Bordeaux with Your Intifada?

Looks like the punishments will continue across the pond until morale improves. France on fire in the “mostly peaceful” riots — according to the BBC — this past weekend could yet ignite a final, furious, Globalist-Jacobin bid to wreck Western Civ as populist nationalism looms ever larger to defeat them. That is, whatever the demonic coalition of desperate Euro elites backed by the Soros NGO empire, the WEF, the UN bureaucracy, possibly the British Crown, and the EU, can induce their Lefty-left useful idiots to act out intifada-style against the people and their culture.

President Macron stepped up Sunday to ask, “How can French people do this to France?” as the ancient tower of the Limoges city hall collapsed in flames. Somebody please inform him that the parties responsible for all the fiery chaos are not necessarily French people. Any way you cut it, this has got to be the end-of-pretend that flooding Europe with jihadis for two decades was a grand and noble idea. Where’s that whiff of grapeshot when you really need it?

You also must wonder whether the American Lefty-left has riot-envy. Their handlers in the Democratic Party and its dark entourage of “resistance” foundations, billionaire NGO-funders, and Deep State seditionists must be itching to unleash similar punishments across the USA, as they managed to do in 2020 to honor the saintly George Floyd. Of course, they don’t have the same resources they enjoyed back then. The US president — know who that is? — has choked off a good deal of their money-laundered cash-flow.

https://www.manufacturedhomepronews.com/wp-content/uploads/2026/10/SinclairLewisThinkItCantHappenHereItIShappeningHereMHProNews.pdf