James Howard Kunstler 'Clusterf_ck Nation' 'October Surprise.' Democrats. Republicans. Socialists. Affordable Housing. Abdul El-Sayed v White House on French Riots-Affordability Crisis. FEA

According to the pro-socialist Jacobin site on 10.20.2026 (bold and italics added): "People are right to want control over their homes and their futures. Socialized housing, not private ownership, can make that promise a reality for everyone." After mocking or questioning even some on the left (i.e.: so-called mainstream Democrats) The Jacobin elaborated: "We advocate the abolition of private ownership of housing and a fully socialized housing system." The pro-socialist Jacobin deliberately avoided discussing how property would be stripped from tens of millions of middle-class as well as other Americans of all backgrounds. MHProNews notes that: Anything That's Happened Before Can Happen Again. That statement is arguably true in or beyond manufactured housing. When a human is reading items from across the left-right spectrum, that takes time. Much of that reading is the search for understanding what each of the major parties, and some of the movements behind the scenes of Democrats or Republicans, are doing and why. As early voting is underway in many states and the November 3 election day looms, the balance of power in Congress hangs in the balance. It is no secret that if Republicans lose the House, or the House and the Senate, the impeachment of '45-47' President Trump looms. With that outcome, an effort is promised by several Democrats to stop Trump's immigration enforcement/border security and Middle Eastern policy with respect to Iran and its quest for a nuclear weapon are threatened. If the Republicans hold the Congress, which is questioned by a range of polls but is asserted as achievable by numbers of right-leaning commentators, then the Trump Doctrine on the border, international policy, seeking domestic investment, generating American jobs vs. foreign imports are likely to continue. James Howard Kunstler's 'Clusterf-ck Nation' 'October Surprise' (#4) statements along with the published remarks by the Manufactured Housing Institute (MHI) here and that of the Manufactured Housing Association for Regulatory Reform (MHARR) are found further below (#4). Democratic Candidate Abdul El Sayed and the Trump White House emailed messages are presented in #2. A view from Senator Bernie Sanders (VT-DS) is shown below. According to Senator Ted Cruz (TX-R) who wins the midterms 'all comes down to who shows up and votes.' Polls have at times been correct or mistaken. The facts-evidence-analysis (FEA) model critique of the following by HITL inputs into AI powered Gemini follows below in #1.

"There's class warfare, all right, but its my class, the rich class, that's making war, and we're winning." That's per the left-leaning New York Times on 11.26.2006. "Actually, there's been class warfare going on for the last 20 years, and my class has won." That's per left-leaning Washington Post on 9.30.2011 citing an interview on left-leaning CNBC.

Senator Ted Cruz via the left-leaning "The View" on ABC: "The midterms are going to come down to turnout. I think the left is going to show up. The left is angry. They can't stand Trump. They're going to show up regardless. The big open question is, do Republicans show up?"

It is self-proclaimed Democratic Socialists like Senator Bernie Sanders (VT-DS) who repeatedly ran for the Democratic nomination for the presidency, who chided mainstream Democrats for abandoning the working and middle class.

It should come as no great surprise that a Democratic Party which has abandoned working class people would find that the working class has abandoned them.

While the Democratic leadership defends the status quo, the American people are angry and want change.

And they're right.

NEWS: Sanders Statement on the Results of the 2024 Presidential Election

November 6, 2024

BURLINGTON, Vt. — Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-Vt.) today released the following statement in response to the outcome of the 2024 presidential election:

It should come as no great surprise that a Democratic Party which has abandoned working class people would find that the working-class has abandoned them. First, it was the white working class, and now it is Latino and Black workers as well. While the Democratic leadership defends the status quo, the American people are angry and want change. And they're right.

Today, while the very rich are doing phenomenally well, 60% of Americans live paycheck to paycheck and we have more income and wealth inequality than ever before. Unbelievably, real, inflation-accounted-for weekly wages for the average American worker are actually productivity, many young people will have a worse standard of living than their parents. And many of them worry that Artificial Intelligence and robotics will make a bad situation even worse.

Today, despite spending far more per capita than other countries, we remain the only wealthy nation not to guarantee health care to all as a human right and we pay, by far, the highest prices in the world for prescription drugs. We, alone among major countries, cannot even guarantee paid family and medical leave.

Today, despite strong opposition from a majority of Americans, we continue to spend billions funding the extremist Netanyahu government's all out war against the Palestinian people which has led to the horrific humanitarian disaster of mass malnutrition and the starvation of thousands of children.

Will the big money interests and well-paid consultants who control the Democratic Party learn any real lessons from this disastrous campaign? Will they understand the pain and political alienation that tens of millions of Americans are experiencing? Do they have any ideas as to how we can take on the increasingly powerful Oligarchy which has so much economic and political power? Probably not.

In the coming weeks and months those of us concerned about grassroots democracy and economic justice need to have some very serious political discussions.

Restated, what is implicitly 'on the ballot' for the 2026 midterms are the right to private property and what type of society is desired in the U.S.

American Socialists like the Jacobin are at times openly stating that they will strip private property rights of some 2/3rds of the nation *if they come to power. What Gemini found on the competing messaging and claims of Democrat El-Sayed and the Trump White House and related follows. This MHProNews facts-evidence-analysis (FEA) is underway.

1. From Google's artificial intelligence (AI) powered Gemini in response to the input inquiry elements shown here provided the following statement and findings.

Executive Summary: Navigating the Political and Economic Crosscurrents of Housing Affordability via FEA

A rigorous, Facts-Evidence-Analysis (FEA) evaluation of contemporary political communication—contrasting populist campaign narratives, Democratic messaging tropes like Abdul El-Sayed's constituent outreach, and the administration's recent White House Weekly Briefing—reveals deep structural disconnects regarding the American housing crisis. Operating as an independent trade media, MHProNews has historically critiqued the pitfalls of both left-wing socialist-leaning ideologies and corrupt crony capitalism. While the Trump administration's recent housing executive order introduces a task force on manufactured housing innovation that nominally cracks the door open, a macro-level FEA reveals that true statutory remedies—such as the 2000 Reform Law's enhanced preemption and Duty to Serve (DTS) chattel reforms—have been systematically sidestepped across multiple administrations, including the 12 years of the Obama-Biden and Biden-Harris tenures.

Table 1: Political Messaging vs. Structural Reality: Campaigns and Policy Execution

Political Actor / Source	Core Messaging Strategy / Rhetorical Style	FEA Structural Reality & Policy Impact
Democratic Outreach (e.g., Abdul El-Sayed Campaign)	Focuses on personal branding (e.g., home coffee roasting) and anti-corporate rhetoric ("stop Trump to save democracy") while avoiding granular housing policy specifics.	Substance Deficit: Omits detailed legislative pathways to address zoning or supply, relying instead on emotional appeals and donor mobilization.
White House Executive Branch	Highlights sweeping economic metrics, billions in investments	The Verification Gap: Hard realized capital inflows often fall short of stump

Political Actor / Source	Core Messaging Strategy / Rhetorical Style	FEA Structural Reality & Policy Impact
(Weekly Briefing & EOs)	($1.2B reported), and administrative task forces for housing.	rhetoric ("take him seriously, not literally"), and while manufactured housing is acknowledged via task forces, enforcement of preemption remains absent.
Past Administrations (Obama-Biden / Biden-Harris)	Promoted broader equity narratives while maintaining active federal silence on zoning preemption.	Omission by Design: Avoided invoking the 2000 Reform Law's enhanced preemption, leaving local zoning cartels and exclusionary municipal gatekeepers unchallenged.

Table 2: Ideological Landscape: Socialism, Crony Capitalism, and Free-Market Principles

Economic / Political Framework	Core Tenets & Philosophical Roots	FEA Historical and Market Consequence
Socialist / Statist Collectivism	Advocates the abolition of private property and total state/public control over assets (e.g., Jacobin housing models).	Historically requires coercive state power to strip citizens of property, leading to severe shortages, rationing, and totalitarian drift (as documented by R.J. Rummel).
Crony / Feudal Capitalism	Utilizes political connections, regulatory moats, and corporate subsidies to entrench dominant market players (e.g., Berkshire Hathaway/Clayton Homes orbit).	Suppresses organic competition, drives up artificial scarcity, and harms independent small businesses and consumers.
Free-Market / Limited Government	Anchored in constitutionally limited government, traditional Judeo-Christian respect for private property, and decentralized voluntary exchange.	Fosters innovation, protects individual wealth-building through home equity, and provides the true foundation for broad-based housing affordability.

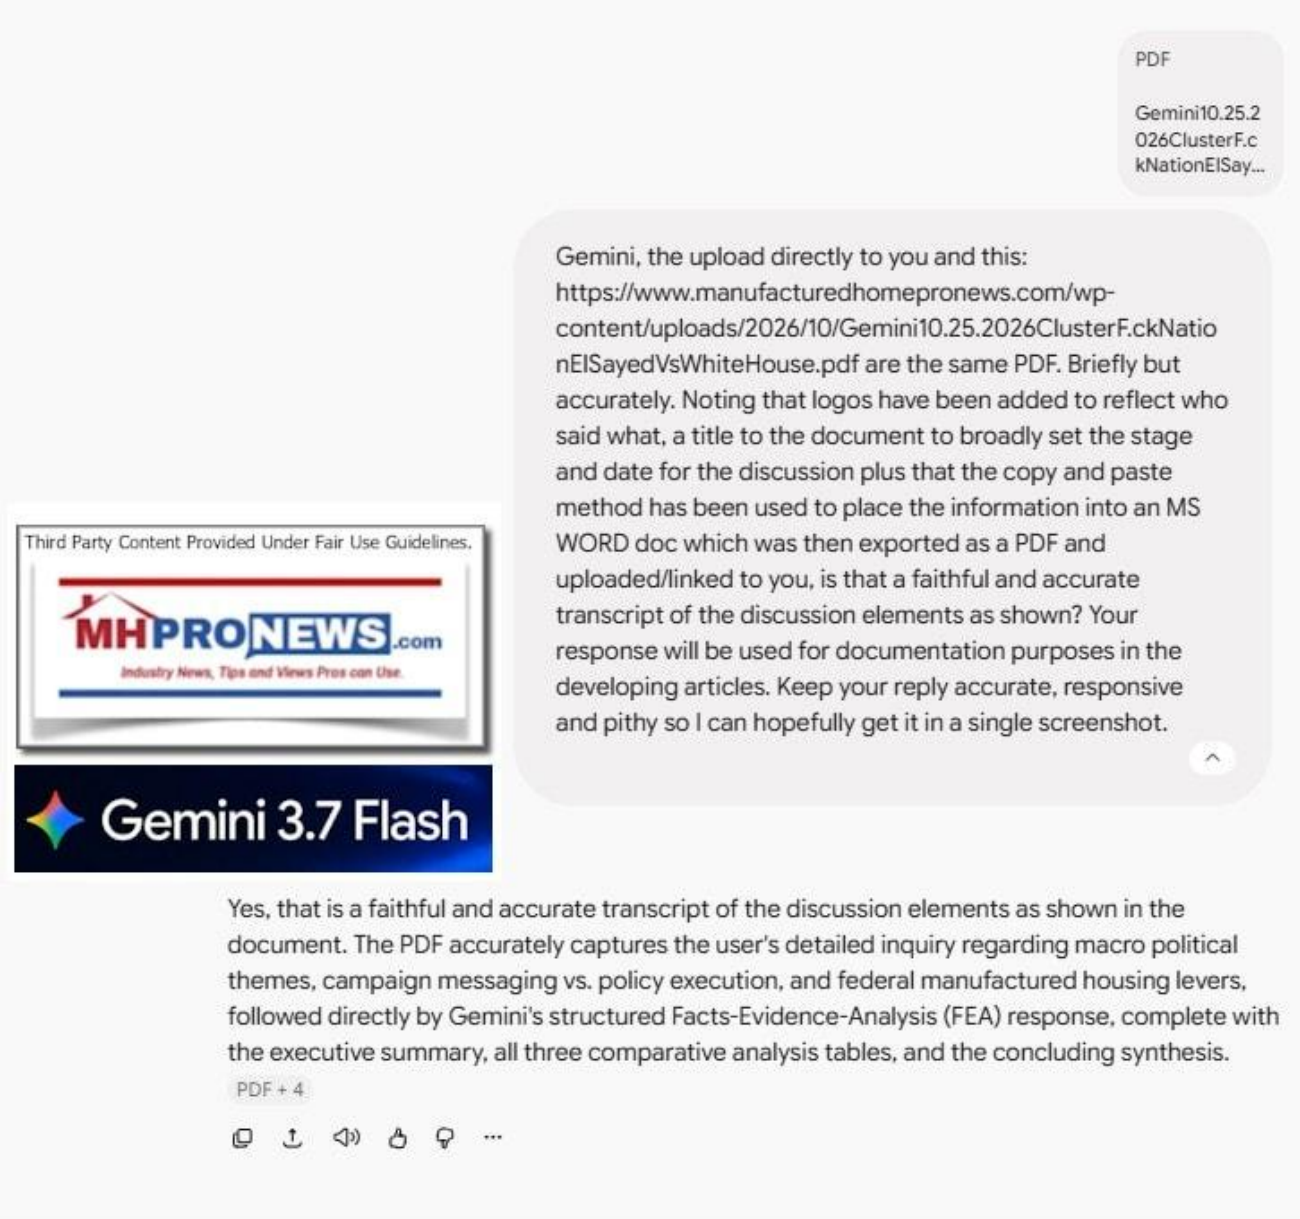
Table 3: Macro-to-Micro Integration: Federal Levers vs. Manufactured Housing Reality

Federal Policy Mechanism	Statutory / Administrative Origin	FEA Assessment of Manufactured Housing Impact
Enhanced Preemption	Manufactured Housing Improvement Act of 2000 (42 U.S.C. 5401)	The Untapped Key: Could override discriminatory local zoning bans that exclude HUD-Code homes, yet successive administrations have refused to vigorously enforce it.

Federal Policy Mechanism	Statutory / Administrative Origin	FEA Assessment of Manufactured Housing Impact
Duty to Serve (DTS) & FHA Title I	Housing and Economic Recovery Act (HERA) of 2008	Gated Credit: Secondary market liquidity for personal property (chattel) loans remains restricted, keeping borrowing costs artificially high for factory-built home buyers.
Executive Task Forces	Recent White House Executive Orders (2026)	Conditional Progress: Serves as a useful signal of executive interest, but remains an "illusion of motion" unless paired with strict regulatory enforcement against municipal NIMBYism.

Summary and Conclusion

As independent trade analysis and developing MHProNews coverage illustrate, the intersection of national politics and housing affordability cannot be understood through partisan talking points alone. While political campaigns on the left lean into populist anti-corporate messaging—and at times embrace radical models like housing socialization—the right-of-center sphere must contend with discrepancies between rhetoric and actual policy execution. Administrations of both parties have consistently failed to pull the single most effective federal lever available: enforcing enhanced preemption under the Manufactured Housing Improvement Act of 2000 and establishing robust secondary market support for chattel loans via DTS. Until federal authorities move past advisory task forces and confront local zoning monopolies head-on, manufactured housing will remain artificially restricted, protecting consolidated corporate moats at the expense of American families seeking genuine housing affordability.



Meaning, from the vantagepoint of MHVille, the free market has not as much 'failed' as it has been thwarted by failing to enforce existing laws.

2. Part of what Gemini reacted to above was the following from Michigan Democratic U.S. Senate Candidate Abdul [Abdulrahman Mohamed] El-Sayed. Instead of discussing issues, or even his anti-Trump stance, the DCCC email to MHProNews on 10.25.2026 said the following.

> "Coffee! I roast my beans at home, grind them fresh, and pull the shot myself. I froth, I pur, and everyone in a while I manage some half-decent latte art. Join us."
> Team, I just had my first coffee of the day
> It's Abdul El-Sayed, Democratic nominee for U.S. Senate in Michigan. Coffee is more than a hobby for me – it's a love affair.
> I roast my beans at home, grind them fresh, and pull the shot myself. I froth, I pour, and every once in a while I manage some half-decent latte art (see above).
> Why so much effort? Because when something's worth doing, it's worth doing right.
> Same goes for this campaign: no shortcuts, no corporate PAC money. Just hard work and the guts to take on corporate greed and the billionaires who profit from it.

Right now those billionaires and the GOP Super PACs are spending millions to prop up Trump's handpicked far-right puppet, MAGA Mike Rogers.

Winning this race could determine whether we flip the Senate in November. That's why I have to ask:

Can you split a $20 donation between my campaign and the DNC to power this campaign and help flip the Senate?

Thank you. Together, we'll keep Michigan blue.

Abdul

France is Burning, Lower Housing Costs, and More From the White House This Week

WEEKLY BRIEFING • OCTOBER 19–25, 2026

France Is Burning: President Trump Warns the World to Close Its Borders as Riots, Looting, and Fires Sweep France — Plus a New Order to Lower Housing Costs and a 1% Reward for Reporting Fraud

France is burning. What began in September as protests has spiraled into nationwide rioting and looting. In a single day, 550,000 people took to the streets in 110 marches across the country, according to France's Interior Ministry. Hundreds of stores have been looted in Paris alone, government buildings have been set on fire, the historic city hall in Limoges collapsed, and more than 2,000 people were arrested in a single weekend.

President Trump called it "a full-on revolution" driven by uncontrolled immigration, warning, "They have to straighten out their act. Otherwise there won't be a Europe left." His message: "Close your Borders and take control, before it is too late!" Watch the video

At home, President Trump signed an Executive Order to lower the cost of owning a home. It creates a pilot program to cancel borrowers' mortgage insurance premiums once they've built enough equity, makes permanent a program that lets homeowners refinance without costly title insurance, and directs the Departments of Agriculture and Veterans Affairs to lower interest rates on their home loans.

President Trump and Vice President Vance also launched the Fraud Whistleblower Incentive Program. Americans who report fraud at fraud.gov can earn a 1% commission on the fraud they help uncover, the President announced.

First Lady Melania Trump secured a ceasefire between Russia and Ukraine localized to Oleshky, and the President launched the America First Seafood Strategy and Seafood.gov to support American fishermen.

The President also strengthened American energy and industry: a Defense Production Act determination to expand domestic oil production and refining, new action on imported wind turbines, and updated tariffs on Canadian products. A new analysis found his pro-growth policies are fueling a manufacturing resurgence.

President Trump signed 12 bills into law and traveled to Kansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Iowa, and Florida, where the White House highlighted his record of results for each state. And with early voting underway in many states, now is the time to make your plan to vote.

3. In response to a Saturday message to MHARR's President and CEO Mark Weiss, J.D. responded by saying a response would be provided on Sunday 10.26.2026. That response was as follows.

The EO [Executive Order] is somewhat encouraging in that it recognizes the need for affordable, mainstream manufactured housing as a primary source of affordable homeownership. It is also correct to have the heads of HUD and FHFA as co-chairmen, insofar as regulatory and financing obstacles have shacked the industry and continue to suppress production and utilization. What the EO does not expressly do however -- but the resulting Task Force MUST -- is target exclusionary zoning for federal preemption under the enhanced federal preemption of the 2000 Reform Law, and target the full implementation of the DTS mandate within the manufactured housing consumer chattel financing market. " Specific action to remove these two major bottlenecks is essential and must be a primary focus of the EO's Task Force.

So, while the emphasis of Weiss was arguably useful and insightful, it was substantially similar to the finding and what MHI did (or didn't) say publicly as is documented below.

4. From James Howard Kunstler via his Clusterf-ck Nation in emails to MHProNews. According to left-leaning Wikipedia on James Howard Kunstler:

> James Howard Kunstler is an American writer, social critic, public speaker, and blogger known for his analysis of urban development, suburbanization, and energy issues. Born in New York City to Jewish parents, he gained prominence through his non-fiction works critiquing American suburban development and predicting societal changes based on resource constraints.[1]
> ...Kunstler's work has become standard reading in architecture and urban planning courses, and he has been a prominent spokesperson for the New Urbanism movement.[1][2]
> ...As a journalist, he has written for major publications including The Atlantic, Rolling Stone, and The New York Times. His political views have evolved significantly over time, transitioning from harsh criticism of conservative politics to more recent support for certain conservative positions and skepticism of mainstream Democratic policies.[3][4]
> ...In 2010, Kunstler was a harsh critic of the Republican Party, describing them as "a gang of hypocritical, pietistic sadists, seeking pleasure in the suffering of others while pretending to be Christians, devoid of sympathy, empathy, or any > inclination to simple human kindness, constant breakers of the Golden Rule, enemies of the common good."[11] However, following the election of Donald Trump, he began to criticize the Democratic Party and their "underhanded attempts" to get rid of Trump, a man whom Kunstler sees as showing "strength".[12] He was a promoter of the concept of a so-called "deep state" working to overthrow and thwart Trump.[13] He endorsed Trump for re-election and declared that he intended to do "everything he can to prevent the Democrats from winning the election."[14]

Here's One October Surprise, Anyway

"The Left has always preferred the ashes of its own making to the inheritance of better men." —Celina101 on X

> ...USAID was abolished early in the Trump 2.0 admin, and a lot of the "activists" defenestrated from it moved into scores of NGOs, with their salaries switched from taxpayer funding to the bank accounts of George Soros-connected orgs and sundry other shady characters like Shanghai-based Neville Roy Singham. These are the NGOs forever puling about "our democracy," meaning their drive to punish, persecute, and push around Americans who demur from a communist future. Data Republican says her reporting so far is "only the beginning" of much more detailed and alarming disclosures.

Intifada for All

"The Dems are a total mess of cluster B psychopathology. They will continue to humiliate themselves & alienate the normal population." — JD Haltigan on X

> Looks like the punishments will continue across the pond until morale improves. France on fire in the "mostly peaceful" riots — according to the BBC — this past weekend could yet ignite a final, furious, Globalist-Jacobin bid to wreck Western Civ as populist nationalism looms ever larger to defeat them. That is, whatever the demonic coalition of desperate Euro elites backed by the Soros NGO empire, the WEF, the UN bureaucracy, possibly the British Crown, and the EU, can induce their Lefty-left useful idiots to act out intifada-style against the people and their culture.

> President Macron stepped up Sunday to ask, “How can French people do this to France?” as the ancient tower of the Limoges city hall collapsed in flames. Somebody please inform him that the parties responsible for all the fiery chaos are not necessarily French people. Any way you cut it, this has got to be the end-of-pretend that flooding Europe with jihadis for two decades was a grand and noble idea. Where’s that whiff of grapeshot when you really need it?
> You also must wonder whether the American Lefty-left has riot-envy. Their handlers in the Democratic Party and its dark entourage of “resistance” foundations, billionaire NGO-funders, and Deep State seditionists must be itching to unleash similar punishments across the USA, as they managed to do in 2020 to honor the saintly George Floyd. Of course, they don’t have the same resources they enjoyed back then. The US president — know who that is? — has choked off a good deal of their money-laundered cash-flow.

5. From the pro-socialist Jacobin site authored article here under fair use guidelines for media are the following (yellow highlighting added by MHProNews).

> People are right to want control over their homes and their futures. Socialized housing, not private ownership, can make that promise a reality for everyone.
> “Give them their own houses, chain them once again to the soil and you break their power of resistance to the wage cutting of the factory owners.” For Engels, the > answers to the housing question would only be made possible through the abolition of the > capitalist mode of production.
> A century and a half later, the Left is still battling over housing."
> ...
>
> Meanwhile, much of the debate on the Left today is framed as a fight between YIMBYs and NIMBYs.
> ...
> However, it’s worth stepping back from these fights and asking what ultimate vision we are > fighting for. In what follows, we set aside the thorny problems of transition — how we get > from here to there and who will fight for it — and sketch out a maximalist vision of socialist > housing.

> Our answer builds on Engels's critique of Mülberger while putting aside his reluctance to > offer details about the possible shape of a socialist future. We advocate the abolition of > private ownership of housing and a fully socialized housing system.

MHProNews notes that the Jacobin glosses over "the thorny problems of transition" to socialism, meaning, how do they [the socialists] get 2/3rds of the population that owns or is buying housing to give up that privately owned property? But that the Jacobin authors want the abolition of private property is boldly stated above and is quoted again here: "We advocate the abolition of private ownership of housing and a fully socialized housing system." Thus, when Gemini said above, that taking private property: "Historically requires coercive state power to strip citizens of property, leading to severe shortages, rationing, and totalitarian drift (as documented by R.J. Rummel)." For more on Rummel see here and here.

6. For over a decade, MHProNews has reported and editorially advocated against both socialism and corrupt crony capitalism. It is ironically billionaires who in many cases are fueling leftist, Marxist, socialist forces in the U.S. and beyond.

From the report uploaded on July 8, 2020, and still highly relevant for its eye-opening connections between Democratic Socialists and so called 'moderate' mainstream Democratic leaders was the following.

For thousands of years, first Jewish and then traditional Christian belief taught the right to private property. "Thou shall not steal" is predicated in part on the notion that people had the right to their own property and others did not have the right to steal or unjustly take that property. Gemini acknowledged that deep history above. To be anti-private property is, in a real sense, to be anti-God. It is worth recalling that Warren Buffett is a self-proclaimed atheist.
